Christian Hero:

AN

ARGUMENT

Proving that no

PRINCIPLES

But those of

RELIGION

Are sufficient to make a

GREAT MAN.

By Sir RICHARD STEELE.

Offendet folido----

Hor.

The SEVENTH EDITION.

LONDON:

Printed for JACOB TONSON at Shakespear's Head over-against Catharine Street in the Strand. MDCCXXII.

Christian Lines:

MA

ARGUMENT

on this gairer?

PRIMORPLES

fur short and

By Sir RICHARD STEELE.

-- brugeli guerces aktore doubre Offender folido----

The Swynnin Epirick,

Printed for Jacon Toxson at Malethen's Ment over-evant Contents in the Street, in the Street, MINGS XXII

To the Right Honourable the

LORD CUTTS,

Colonel of His Majesty's Cold-Scream
Regiment of Guards, &c.

Senfe that therebis a Reftles

My Lordinal marchine

HE Address of the following Papers is fo very much Due to your Lord mere Report of what has past A 2 upon

Christian Idean:

NIN

ARGUMENT

frotteg this no

PRINCIPLES

in Steds in t

By Sir RICHARD STEELE.

- Fragels gaarers ishiere donere Vect.

The Swiener Epirton.

LONDON:

Printed for JACOB TOXSON at Shelr.

Spear's Meas over-oping Contractions:
in the Samuel Labor Labor in the Jowe-

To the Right Honourable the

LORD CUTTS,

Colonel of His Majesty's Cold-Scream
Regiment of Guards, &c.

Sense that there is a Religion and Subtle 680 8 Confiant-

My Lord, in The second

HE Address of the following Papers is fo very much Due to your Lord

mere Report of what has past
A 2 upon

DEDICATION.

upon my Guard to my Commander, for they were Writ upon Duty, when the Mind was perfectly Disengag'd and at Leisure in the Silent Watch of the Night, to run over the Busie Dream of the Day; and the Vigilance which Obliges us to suppose an Enemy always near us, has Awaken'd a Sense that there is a Restless and Subtle one which constantly attends our Steps, and meditates our Ruin.

Thoughts of this Nature, a Man may with Freedom acknowledge to Your Lord Deship, who have ever been so far from running into the Fathionable Vice of Exploding Reli-

DEDICATION

Religion, that your Early Valour first appear'd against the Profes'd Enemies of Christianity; and Buda had Transmitted you to late Posterity; but that you your self have Obliterated your Part in that Glorious Scene by the fresher Memory of you, at Limerick and Namure.

With one honest Purpose of Life, and constant Service of one Interest, and one Cause, in what Country have you not Fought? in what Field have you not Bled? But I know I here Offend you, nor will you allow Warmth in Commendation to be like a Friend; but if, my LORD, to speak A 3 you you Generous, Honest, and Brave be not so, I do asfure you 'tis the only Thing I'll ever do in common with your Enemies.

DEDICATION.

I faid your Enemies; but if there are any who have Ignorance or Malice enough to be fuch, their little Hates must be lost in the Distinction the better World allow you; and that County (whole Difcerning is refin'd by a Learned and Elegant Univerfity) has done you fo great an Honour, in making you Unanimoully their Representative in Parliament, that they who would Oppose your Reputation, do but confess they

DEDICATION.

they are Unacquainted with what passes in the World, and Strangers to the Refidence of Knowledge and Virtue.

Twas there you received those Rudiments of Honour, which have render'd your Life Conspicuous enough to make you appear a worthy Descendant of an Ancient and Distinguish'd Family, which has Serv'd the Crown in the most Eminent Stations, and been equally Favourites of their Country; 'twas there you receiv'd those Impressions which Inspire that true Use of your Being, which so justly divides your Time, between Labour

A 4 and

DEDICATION

and Diversion, that the one does but Recreate for the other, and which give a Generous Contempt of both, when they come in Competition with the Service of that Country which you Love, and that God whom you Worthip.

Go on, my Lord, thus to Contemn, and thus to Enjoy Life; and if some great English Day does not call for that Sacrifice, which you are always ready to Offer, may you in a Mature Age go to Sleep with your Ancestors, in Expectation not of an Imaginary Fame, but a Real Immortality.

As

DEDICATION.

As for the Present I now make you, if you'll Accept it with your usual Goodness and Affection to me, I shall Entertain no surther Hopes; for as your Favour is my Fortune, so your Approbation is my Fame.

I am,

MY LORD,

Your Lordship's

Most Obedient, most Faithful

and most Humble Servant,

Tower Guard, March 23, 1701.

RICHARD STEELE.

A 5

DEDIGATION

As for the Prefent I now make you, if you'll Accept it with your usual Goodness and first on the first on the light in the stain no mether Hopes; in as your 60 tour Approbation is the fame.

ten in the second

The Cartin of The Court of the

the facilities when supplied for

Mor Obelian, and Tentifel

and most Example Servant

make with put to the book page.

RICHARD STEELE

AS

13 NO 65

HE World is divided between two forts of People, the Men of Wit and the Men of Business, and these two have it wholly in their Power; but however Mighty the latter may esteem themselves, they have much the less share in the Government of Mankind, and till they can keep the others out of Company as well as Employment, they will have an almost Irresistable Dominion over us: For their Imagination is so very quick and lively, that in all they enjoy or posses, they have a Relish highly Superior to that of slower Man; which fine Sense of things they can communicate to others in so prevailing a manner, that they give and take away what Impressions abey please; for while the Man of Wet speaks, he bestows upon his Hearers, an apt Representation of his Thomphes all the Happiness and Pleasure of being such as he is, and quickens our heavier Life into Joys we found never of our felves bave saft ed, so that we are for our own sakes his Slaves and Followers: But indeed they generally use this charming force with the utmost Tyranny, and as 'tis too much in their Power. misplace our Love, our Hatred, our Defires and Aversions, on improper Objects; for what when we are left to our selves, we find Truth discolour'd to us; and they of Faculties above us have wrapt things, in their own Nature of a dark and borrid Aspect, in so bright a Difguise, that they have stamp'd a kind of Praise and Gallantry on some Vices, and balf persuaded us that a Whore may be still a Beauty. and an Adulterer no Villain.

These Ills are supported by the Arbitrary Sway of Legislative Ridicule, while, by I know not what Pedantry of good Breeding, Conversation is consin'd to Indifferent, Low, or perhaps Vicions Subjects; and all that is Serious, Good or Great, almost Banished the World: For in Imitation of those we have mentioned, there daily arise so many Pretenders to do Mischief, that what seem at first but a Conspiracy, is now a general Insurrection against Virtue; and when they who really have Witled the way, it is hardly to be prevented, but that they must be followed by a Crowd who would be such, and make what shift they can to appear so, by beloing one Defect with a nother, and supplying mant of Wit with want of Grace, and want of Reputation with want of Shame.

PRE RACE

Thus are Men burry'd away in the Prosecution of mean and sensual Defires, and instead of Employing their Passions in the fervice of Life, they spend their Life in the ser-vice of their Passions; yet the 'tis a Truth very little received, that Virtue is its own Re-ward, 'tis farely on underiable one, that Vice is its own Punishment; for when we have giv'n our Appetites a loofe Rein, we are immediately precipitated by 'em into unbounded and endles Wishes while we repine at our Fortune. if its Narrowness curbs 'em, tho' the Gratification of 'em were a Kindness, like the Indulgence of a Man's Thirst in a Dropfy; but this Distemper of Mind is never to be remedied till Men will more unrefervedly attempt the Work. and will resolve to value themselves rather upon a strong Reason to allay their Passions, than a fine Imagination to raile 'em.

For if we best judge of things when we are not actually engaged or concerned in em, every Man's own Experience must inform him that both the Pleasures we follow, and the Sorrows we shaw, are in Nature very different from what we conceive em, when we observe that past Enjoyments are Anxious, past Sufferings pleasing in the Reslection; and since the Memory mary of the one makes at apprehendour Servingth, the other one Weakings, in it we degenered if a trivial Mind to profes the Satisfactions that lead to Inquiestade before Pains that lead to Irauquility.

But if the confift (at it occasing does) in the Mind's Enjayment of Truth, the most versions Gircumstance of its Anguist, is that of being in Doubs; from which Men will sind but a very front Relief, if they draw it from the Collections or Observations of sedentary Men, who have been called Wise for proposing Rules of active Life, which they cannot be supposed to understand: For between the Arrogant and Fonatick Indolence of some, and the False and Pleasurable Felicity of others (which are equally Chimera's) a Man is so utterly divided, that the Imprinct of Philosophers appears as Financialists as the Missing of Lovers.

We feall not, 'tis bop'd, be underflood by foying this, to Imagine that there is a sufficient Force in the following stort Essay, to stem the Universal and Destructive Torrent of Error and Pleasure; it is sufficient if we can stand without being carry'd away with it, and we shall very willingly resign the Glory of an Opposition, if we can enjoy the Safety of a Dessert; and as it was at first attempted to disenge my own Mind from deceiving Appearances, so it can be published for no other end, but to so others a thinking with the same inclination:

chination: Which whoever will pleafe to to will make a mach better Argament for his own private Ufe, than any body elfe can for Him: For all Habits of the Mind, no more than those of the Body, are to be cared by the Patient's Approbation of the Medicine, except He'll rejolve to take it; and if my Fellow-Soldiers (to whose Service more especially I would direct any Thomphis I were capable of) would form to themselves (if any do not) a constant Reason of their Actions, they would find themselves better prepar'd for all the Vicissitudes they are to meet with, when instead of the changeable Heat of mere Courage and Blood, they acted upon the sirm Motives of Duty, Valour, and Constancy of Soul.

For (bowever they are distincted by some Unthinking, not to say, Ungrateful Men) to Prosess Arms, is to Prosess being ready to die for others, nor is it an Ordinary Struggle between Reason, Sense, and Passion, that can raise Men to a calm and ready Negligence of Life, and animate 'em to Assault without Fear, Pursue without Cruelty, and Stab without Hatred.

But Virtuous Principles must infallibly be not only better than any other We can Embrace, to Warm us to great Attempts, but also to make Our Days in their Ordinary Passage side away Agreeably: For as nothing is more Daring than Truth, so there is nothing more Chearful than than Innocence: And indeed Inced use have been beholden to the Experience of a various Life to have been convinced, that true Happinels is not to be found but where I at prefere place it; For I was long ago informed where only it was to be had, by the Reverend Dr. Ellis, my ever Honour'd Tutor; which Great Obligation I could not but Mention, tho my Gratitude to him is perhaps an Accupation of my felf, who hall appear to have so little Profited by the influence of so was the Temptation of (what is always in his Power) being Famous.

theas of races Company of BI, Valuer, and Configure, and Configure of Soul.

The Christian HERO:

to see with the O Ranged well from the

No Principles but those of

RELIGION

SUFFICIENT ST

To make a Great Man.

We can possibly undertake, to rescue our Minds from the Prejudice with which a false and unreasonable Fond, ness of our selves has enslaved us. But the Examination of our own Bosoms is so ungrateful an Exercise, that we are forc'd upon a Thousand little Arts, to lull our selves not an impersect Tranquisty, which we might obtain sincere and uninterrupted, if we had Courage chough to look at the ghastly Part of our Condition: But we are still Flatterers to our selves, and Hypocrites the wrong way, by chusing, instead of the solid Satisfaction of Innocence and Truth, the returning Pangs of Conscience, and working our our Dampation as we are taught to do our Happing, with Fear and Trembling.

neder

Quiet to our felves: So Phantastical are we as to dress for a Ball when we are to set out on a Journey; and upon Change of Weather, are justly derided, not pitied by the Beholders. How then shall we prepare for the unaccountable Road of Life, when we know not how long or how foort it will prove, or what Accidents we shall meet in our Paf-fage? Can we take any thing with us that can make us chearful, ready and prepar'd for all Occa-fions, and can support us against all Encounters? Yes, we may (if we would receive it,) a Confidence in God. Yet, left this be impos'd upon Men by a blind force of Custom, or the Artifice of such Perfons whose Interest perhaps it may be to obtrude upon our Mirth, and our Gaiety, and give us a me-lancholly Prospect (as some Men would persuade us) to maintain themselves in the Lunary they de-ny us; let us not be frighted from the liberal use of our Senses, or meanly refign our present Opini-ons, till we are convinced from our own Reflection also, that there is something in that Opinion which can make us less insolent in Joy, less depressed in Adversity, than the Methods we are already engaged in. And indeed the chief Cause of Irresolution in either State, must proceed from the want of an ade-quate Motive to our Actions, that can render Men Dauntless and Invincible both to Pleasure and Pain. It were not then, mothinks, an useless Enquiry to fearch into the Reason that we are so willing to arm our selves against the Assaults of Delight and Sorthose of Religion; and how it has obtain'd, that when we fay a thing was done like an old Roman, we have a generous and sublime Idea, that warms and kindles in us, together with a certain Self-discoun, and defire of limitation; when, on the other side, to say, 'T was like a Primitive Christian, chills Ambition, and seldom rises to more than the celd Approbation of a Duty that perhaps a Man wishes he were not oblig'd to. Or, in a word, Why is it that the Heathen struts, and the Christian sneaks in our Imagination? If it be as Machiavil says, That Religion throws our Minds below noble and hazardous Pursuits, then its Followers are Slaves and Cowards; but if it gives a more hardy and aspiring Genius than the World before knew, then He, and all our sine Observers, who have been pleased to give us only Heathen Portraitures, to say no worse, have robb'd their Pens of Characters the most truly Gallant and Heroick that ever appear'd to Mankind.

when

About the time the World receiv'd the best News it ever heard, the Men whose Actions and Fortunes are most pompoully array'd in Story, had just acted or were then performing their Parts; as if it had been the Design of Providence to preposses at that time, after a more singular manner than ordinary, the Minds of Men, with the Trappings and Furniture of Glory and Riches, to heighten the Virtue and Maguanimity of those who were to oppose 'em all, by passing through Wants, Miseries and Disgraces; and indeed the shining Actions of these Halustrious Men do yet glare so much in our Faces, that we lose our Way by following a faise Fire; which well consider d is but a delusive Vapour of the Earth, when we might enjoy the leading constant Light of Heaven.

To make therefore a just Judgment in our Conduct, let us consider two or three of the most eminent

nent Heathen, and observe whether they, or we, are better appointed for the hard and weary. March of human Life, for which Examination we will not look into the Closets of Men of Reflection and Retirement, but into the Practice and Resolution of those of Action and Enterprize. There were never Persons more conficuously of this latter fort, than those concern'd in the Fortunes and Death of Gargand since the Pulse of Manthen beat at the highest, we will think it sufficient to our Purpose carefully to review Him, and Them, as they March by us, and if we can see any apparent Detect in their Armour, find out some way to mend it in our own. But it will require all our Patience, by taking notice of the minutest Things, to come at (what is absolutely necessary to us) the Recesses of their Hearts, and Polds of their Tempers.

and Folds of their Tempers.

Salluft has transmitted to us two very great, but very different Personages, Caser and Care, and placed pearing to advantage, by the alternate Light and Shade of each other. Cafar's Bounty, Magnificence, Popular and Sumptuous Entertainments ftole an univerfal Affection; Cato's Parlimony, Integrity, Auflere and Rigid Behaviour commanded as universal Reverence: None could do an ungentile thing before Cafar, none a loofe one before Cate: To one twas Recommendation enough to be Miferable. to the other to be Good: To Cafar all Faults were pardonable, to Cate none: One gave, obliged, pity'd and succour'd indifferently; t'other blam'd, oppos'd and condemn'd impartially: Cafar was the Refuge of the Unhappy, Cato the Bane of the Wicked: Cato had rather be, than feem Good; Cafar was careless of either, but as it ferv'd his Intereffs: Cate's Sword was the Sword of Justice, Cafar's that of Ambition: Cefar had an excellent common Sense and right Judgment Tuen Judgment of Occasion, Time and Place; the other blunt Man understood not Application, knew how so be in the Right, but was generally so, out of Season: Casar's Manner made even his Vice charming, Gam's even his Virtue disagreeable: Casar instituted Ill, Caso intruded Good: Casar in his Sayings, his Actions and his Writings was the first and happiest of all Men: In his Discourse he had a constant Wit and right Reason; in his Actions, Gallantry and Success; in his Writings, every thing that any Author can pretend to, and one which perhaps no Man else ever had; he mentions himself with a good Grace. Thus it was very natural for Casar, adorn'd with every Art; Master of every necessary Quality, either for Use or Ornament, with a steady and well-plac'd Industry to out-run Casa, and all like him, who had none and defir'd none but (an ever weak Party) the Good for his Friends.

Now this fort of Men were Cafar and Caso, and by these Arts they arriv'd at that height, which has left one's Name proverbial for a Noble and Princely Nature, t'other's for an Unmov'd and Inexorable Honesty: Yet, without following em thro' all the hand-some Incidents and Passages of Life, we may know em well enough in Miniature, by beholding em only in their manner of Dying: For in those last Minutes, the Soul and Body both collect all their Force, either bravely to oppose the Enemy, or gracefully receive the Conqueror, Death.

Cafar by a long Tract of Successes, was now become apparent Master of his Country, but with a Security that's natural to gallant Men, Heroically forgave the most inveterate of his Opposers: Now was he follow'd with Applause, Renown, and Accelemation: His Valour had subdued the Bodies, his Clemency the Minds of his Enemies: And how bless'd must the Earth be under his Command, who who feems to court Dominion for no other end, but to indulge an infatiable Mind in the glorious Pleafures of bultowing and forgiving? This was the Rigure Cefer bore in the World's Opinion, but not in Care's. He was there a Tyrant in spite of the Gloss of Success and of Fortune, which could not create Appearances bright enough to dazzle his Eyes from feeing the Traiter in the Conqueror: He knew to give a Man his own as a Bounty was but a more impudent Robbery, and a Wrong improved by the Slavery of an Obligation. He justly and generously distained that his Fellow Citizen should pretend to be his Lord; to his honest Mind a Pardon was but a more arrogant Infair, nor could he bear the Apprehension of seeing his Equal institut upon him a symmical Forgivines: What then must this unhappy good Man do? Whither shall opmust this unhappy good Man do? Whither shall op-press'd Virtue it from Slavery? From Slavery? No. He is still Pree Lord of Himself, and Master of his Passions; Cofar is the Captive, He is Shackled, He is Chain'd; and the numerous Troops which he books the Companions of his Triumphs, and his Glories, are but fo many Witnesses of his Shame and Confusion, to whom he has by an open Usur-pation manifested his broken Faith, sale Profession, and prostituted Honour. But how far this Impresfion of intrinsick Glory and Happiness in sincere though distress'd Virtue, and the Sense of a wicked Man's abject, though prosperous Condition (which: Catt's Philosophy gave Him) did avail in his affilited Hours; the Resolution he is going to take will demonstrate.

He had now at Utica fresh and shocking Intelligence of the gathering Adherents to his Enemy, and could read, in his own Company, the mere Fol-lowers of Forutne in their Countenance, but ob-ferred it with a negligent and undaunted Air, concould only for the Fate of others, whose weaks Picy of themselves made 'em the Objects of his Compassion also. It was visible by a thousand little officious things he did, he was resolved to leave this had World: For he spent the Day, which he designed should be his last, in a certain Vanity of Geodness: He Consulted, Persuaded, and Dispatched all he thought necessary for the Safety of those that were about him; which Services they received from him, whose Intent they saw, with Tears, and Shame, and Admiration.

He continued the whole Evening this affected Resources of his Friends Anxiety for him, which Enjoyment of his Friends Anxiety for him, which he rais'd by fet Difcourfes, and shated, or rather confirm'd by a fludied Indifference, 'till he went he raised by fee Discourses, and abated, or rather confirmed by a studied Indisference, 'till he went to Bed, where he read Plato's Immortality, and Guessia a future Life: At last he enquired for his Sword, on purpose mis-laid by his Son; they did not immediately bring it, which he seem'd to take no notice of, but again fell to his Book: After his second Lecture, he again wanted his Sword: Their Hestation in letting him have it, threw him into an unseemly Ruge, and Expostulation with his Kriends, whose obliging Sorrow with heldit: What Friends, whose obliging Sorrow with heldit: What has he done, what has he committed, to be be-tray'd into the hands of his Enemy? Had Cato's Wildom fo fan left him, that he must be difbir Son feen to indiferent in his Father, that he was not to be trufted with himfelf? To all this cruel and intemperate Question, he was answer'd with the humbleft Behaviour, tendereft Befeechings and deepest Esteem: They implor dhis Stay among ft 'em as their Genius, their Guardian, and Bene-fector, Among the reft, a fond Slave was putting in his Refiltance, and his Affliction, for which he dash'd the poor Fellow's Teeth out with his Fifty THOMA.

and fored out of the Room his lamening Friends, with Noife, and Taunt, and Tamult; a little while after had his Hand, with which he struck his Servent, dress'd, key down and was heard to Shore; but sure we may charitably enough believe, from all this unquiet Carriage, that the Sleep was differabled, from which as soon as he awak'd, he Stabb'd himself, and sell on the Floor: His Fall alarm'd his wretched Dependants, whole help he resisted by tearing open his own Bowels, and rushing out of Life with Fury, Rage, and Indignation.

This was the applauded Exit of that Noble Roman, who is said with a superior and invincible Constancy to have cluded the Partiality of Fortune, and cleap'd the incursion upon the Liberty of his Country: It seems then, had he liv'd, his own had been lost, and his calling himself still free, and Casar the Usurper a Bond-man and Slave, were but mere Words; for his Opinion of things was in scaling Stunnid by Success, and he dy'd Disappointed of the Imaginary Self Existence his own Set of Thoughts had promised him; by an Action below the Precepts of his Philosophy, and the Constancy of his Life.

Thus did Case leave the World, for which indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed he was very units, in the Hands of the Mish indeed

Thus did Cate leave the World, for which indeed he was very unfit, in the Hands of the most Skilful Man in it, who at his Entrance on its Empire excelled his past Glorious Life, by using with so much Temper and Moderation, what he had purchas'd with so much Bloodshed and Violence: But we must leave at present this busic and Insessant Mind to the Meditation of Levelling inaccessible Mountains, check-ing the Course State Occasions and accessions the Parent Course of the December 2018 of the Parent Course ing the Course of the Ocean, and correcting the Peis of Time: We must leave him employ din Modelling the Universe (now his own) in the secure Enjoyment of a Life hitherto led in illustrious Hazards, and now every way fafe, but where tisits Beauty to lye open, to the Treachery of his Friends. Among

Among the many Pretenders to that Character was Caffees, an able and experienced Soldier, bound to him by no left an Obligation, than the giving him Life and Quarter in Battel; He was of a Dark, Sullen and Involved Spirit, quick to receive, but flow to discover a Distaste; His Angernever flew into his Face, but descended to his Heart, which rankled and prey'd upon it felf, and could not admit of Com-polure, either from Religion or Philosophy; but being a perfect Epicurean, and fancying there were none, or if any, only Lazy and Supine Deities, must necellarily Terminate his Hopes and Fears in himself, and from his own Arm expect all the Good and Evil of which his Life was capable: This Man, in his Temper uncasse, and piqu'd by a certain Partiality of Casar's to his Disadvantage, could not satisfie a Sedate Bloody Humour by any less Reparation than his Ruin; and having a revengeful Biass of Mind, a short Memory of Kindnesses, and an indelible Resentment of Wrongs, refolv'd to cancel an odious Bene-fit, by a pleasing Injury: To this Determination he was prompted by the worlt only Good Quality a Man can have, an undaunted Courage, which fermented in Him a refiless and Gnawing Meditation of his Enemy's, that is, his Benefactor's Death; A Thought befitting the Greatness of his Ambition, and the Largeness of his pernicious Capacity; His Capacity which confifted in a skilful Dissimulation of his Faults; for being full of those Vices which nearly approach, and eafily assume the Resemblance of Virtue, and feldom throw a Man into visible and obvious Follies, he to well accommodated his ill Qualities to the good ones of those with whom he Convers'd, that he was very well with the best Men by a Similitude of their Manners; his Avarice ob-tain'd the Frugal; His Spleen, and Diffelish of Joy, the Sober and Abstinent; His Envy, and Harred of Superiors, the Affecters of Publick Liberty: This confiderable Wretch skilfully warm dandung'd some of his own Temper, whom he knew ready for any great Mischief, to pull down the overgrown Gaser, and ensured others by the specious Presence of a sincere Love to his Country, to meet all Hazards for her Recovery. These illustrious Russians, who were indeed Man of the most Weight, and the boldest Spirits of the Roman Empire, designed to dispatch him in the Eye of all the World, in topen Senate; but neither their Quality or Accomplishments were great enough to support 'em in so Nesarious an Attempt, without there could be an Expedient thought of, to give it a more facred Esteem, than any of their of, to give it a more facred Efteem, than any of their Characters could inspire: "Twas therefore necessary to imake Marcus Brutus of the Conspiracy."

This Gentleman possess of the very Bosom of Casar, who having had a Notorious Intrigue with his Mother, was believed to have shought him his Son; but whether that, or an Admiration of his Virtue, was the cause of his Fondness, He had so tender a regard for him, that at the Battel of Pharfalia he gave it in Orders to the whole Army, if he would not take Quarter to let him escape: He was, like Cafar, addicted to Letters and Arms, and the not equal to him in his Capacity for either, above him in the use of both. He never drew his Sword but with a defign to serve his Country, nor ever Read with any other purpose but to subdue his Passions, so that he had from Books rather an Habit of Life, than a Faculty of Speech; in his Thomphis as well as Actions he was a strict Follower of Honesty and Justice; all he said, as well as all he said, seem'd to flow from a publick and unbias'd Spirit: He had no occasion for the Rowers of Floquence to beable to persuade, for all Men knew 'cwas their Interest to be of his Mind; and he had, before he spoke, that that first Point, the good will of his Audience, for every Man's Love of himself made him a Lover of Drawn. He had this Eminence without the least taint of Vanity, and a great Fame feem's not so much the Pursuit, as the Consequence of his Actions: Thus should he do a Thing which might be liable to Exception, Men would be more apt to suspect their own Judgment than his Integrity, and believe whatever was the Cause of the Action, it must be a good one, since it mov'd him: And tho' a parfect Love of Mankind was the Spring of all he acted, that Human Temper never threw him into Facility, but since he knew an ungrounded Compassion to one Man might be a Cruelty to another, mere Distresses without Justice to plead for em could never prevail upon him; but, all Gentle as he was, he was impregnable to the most repeated Importunity, even that of his own good Nature.

Such was the Renown'd Britis, and one would think a Man who had no ill Ambition to fatisfie, no loofe Pathons to indulge, but whose Life was a Regular, Easie, and Sedate Motion, should be in little Temptation of falling into a Plot; but ill Men, where they cannot meet a convenient Vice, can make use of a Virtue to a bale purpole.

d

C

nt

n

Í

d

S,

e, ell

be

ad

est

z,

at

He was Lineally Descended from the Famous Bruns, that extinguished the Tarquins, whose Debauches and Cruelties made a Regal Name in Rome as justly odious, as that of the Brusi venerable for the Extirpation of it; and Cafar had very lately, in the midst of an absolute and unlimited Power, betray'd a Fanstatick Ambition of being call'd King, which render'd him Obnoxious to the Malice of the Conspirators and the Virtue of Bruss. This was the Place where the Magnanimity of that Patriot seem'd most accessible, for twas obvious, that the who wanted nothing else to spur him to Glo-B 2:

rious Attempts, must be also Animated by the Memory of Illustrious, Ancestors, and not like narrow and degenerate Spirits, be attisfied with the Fantask of Honour derivid from others, from whom, without a Similitude of Virtue, 'tis an unhappy distinction to descent.

Yet however hopeful this Handle appear'd, they could not lo abruptly attempt upon his swful Character, as immediately to propole the Murder to him, without some distant Preparation of Mind to receive it. There were therefore these Words frequently dropt in his way; from unknown Hands: Thou art no longer Brutus: Thou art alleep, Brutus; and the like; by which Artisice he grew very Thoughtful and Busie with himself, about the purpose of these Advertisements: One of such Moments Cassus took hold of, and opened to him the great Debign for the Liberty of his Country from Cassus's Usurpation: There needed no more to make him do a thing, but his Belief that 'twas Just's He soon consented that Oasar deserv'd to Die, and since he did, to Die by his Hand: Gaining this Personage, made all ripe for Execution, and Cassus possess'd a full Satisfaction, in that he had engaged a Man in the Attempt, who in the eyes of the People, instead of being sully'd by it, would stamp a Justice and Authority upon the Action; whose confirm'd Reputation was sufficient to expiate a Murder, and confectate an Assassing.

Yet the his Justice made him readily consent to Cajar's Death, his Gratitude upon Reflection shook his Resolution to Act in it; all which Conflict with himself we cannot view without the incident of Percia's Story.

This Lady observed her Husband fall on a sudden from an easie, placed and fond, into a troubled, short and distracted Behaviour; she saw his Mind too much ememploy'd for the conjugal Endearments, and kind Tendernelies, in which the was usually happy, yet upon this Observation grew neither Jealous or Sullen, but mourn'd his Silence of his Affliction to her with as deep a Silence. This Lady, I say, this noble Roman Wife turn'd all her Suspicion upon her self, and modestly believ'd twas her incapacity for bearing so great a Secret, as that which discompos'd the stedsaft Britis, made him conceal from her an Affliction, which she thought she had a Title to participate, and therefore resolved to a Title to participate; and therefore refolv'd to know of her felf, whether his Secreey was a Wrong to her before the would think it fo; to make this Experiment, the gave her felf a deep Stab in the Thigh, and thought if the could bear that Torture, the could also that of a Secret; the Anguish and Concealment of her Wound threw her into a Fever, in that condition the thus spoke to her Husband.

y ŀ 0

0 ġ-5: 4ry

1-0-

he

m ke

He

ce

a

in

ead

ind

DU-

onto ook

rith

of

den

ort

uch

em-

" I, Brutas, being the Daugh-Vid. Mr. Duke's "you in Marriage, not like a "Concubine, to partake only Translation of the Life of Brutus.

" of the common Civilities of " Bed and Board, but to bear a Part in all your " good and all your evil Fortunes; and for my " part, when I look on you, I find no Reason to " repent this Match; But from Me, what Evidence " of my Love, what Satisfaction can you receive, " if I may not there with you in your most hidden " Griefs, nor be admitted to any of your Counsels, " that require Secrecy and Truft? I know very well, " that Women feem to be of too weak a Nature to " be trufted with Secrets; but certainly, Brutus, a

" Virtuous Birth and Education, and a Conversation with the Good and Honourable, are of some force " to the forming our Manners, and ffrengthning our

"Natural Weaknels; and I can boast that I am the " Daughter,

Drughter of Case, and the Wife of Britis. In which two great Titles, the before I par too little Confidence, yet now I have try's my felt, I find that even squinft Grief and Pain I am invincible, She then told him what the had done, but it is not cafe to seprefent the kind Administration such a Discourse must give a Husband; and the sweet Transport that was drawn from their mutual Affiliation, is too delicate a touch of Mind to be under-flood but he a Bratter and a Passis. Yet the he front but by a Britis and a Porisi. Yes the he was not too Wife to be tender to his Wife, when he had unbefore's himself, in spite of this life Action, and a thousand nameless things, that occur'd to his Memory to soften him, he left his illustrious Heroln in her Pains and her Sortows, to pursue his publicle Resolutions. But he is gone, and she can burst into those Team which the Awa office Virtue had made her smother; for how also shall the Heart of Woman receive so hursh a Virtue, as to gratifie her Husband's Wille by consensing to his Rein? of Woman receive so harsh a Virtue, as to gratishe her Husband's Will, by consenting to his Ruin? How shall the struggle with her own Weakness and his Honour? But while she hay in his Bosom she learn'd all the Gallantry of it, and when the ponders his siminantal Fame, his Generous Justice, and Roman Resolution, her blind enlarges into a Great-ness, which surmounts her Sex, and her Affection; when the Views him in the Conspicuous part of Lite, the can bear, my Triumph up his Loss; but when the restacts and remembers their Tenderer Hours, thus would he Look, thus would he Talk, such was his Gesture, Mein, the Mirth, the Guiety of the Man she Lord (which Instances are more intimate Objects of Affection, that Mena greater Qualities) then she is all Woman, she resigns the great; but laments the agreeable Man: Can then my Britis leave me? Can he leave these longing Arms, for Fame? She has no just Notion ing Arms for Fame? She has no just Notion of my higher Being to support her wretched Condition, but however her Female Infirmity made her languish, she has still Constancy enough to keep a Secret that concerns her Husband's Reputation, tho' the melts away in Tears, and pines into Deat in Contemplation of her Sufferings.

Such must have been the Soliloguy of this Memorable Wife, who has left behind her an everlaiting Argument, how far a Generous Treatment can make that tender Sex go even beyond the Refolution of Man, when we allow that they are by Nature form'd to Pity; Love and Fear, and we with an Impulse to

Ľ 2

5

•

f t

r ι,

y

e

r

16

B

of

Ambition, Danger and Adventure,

The World bore a Gloom and heavy Prefage of Cafar's approaching Fate. Tis faid Wild Beafts came into the molt frequented Parts of the City, Apparations in the Streets, unufual Illuminations in the Streets, unufual Illuminations in the Streets, and inaufpicious Sacrifices damp'd the Hearts of all Men, but the Affaffins, who with an incredible Calm of Mind expect the opportunity of Experimental Programme in the Blood of the of Satisting their Vengeance in the Blood of the Utirper; yet was not Coffice himself wholly uncon-cera'd, for the he was as great as Atheist as any among Us can pretend to be, he had the Weakness and Superfiction at that time, to invoke Sta Pompey for his Affiltance. It is as oblesivable, that on, the Evening before his Fate, in a Supper-Convertation (at one of his Murderer's Houses) on the Subject of Death, pronounced a sudden one to be the most definable, and a little shogg'd with reiterated ill Omens, and touch'd with the foreboding Dreams and Prights of a tender Wife, refold to forbear going to the Senate on the Morning appointed for his Essention; which Difficulty D. Bruine undertook to get over; a Gentleman fo inperlatively excellent that way, that he could not only upon fuch an occasion appear Compas'd, line B 4 also in very good Humaur, this seeing Roffian rallied away his Fears, and with a very good Mein conducted his Friend to his Murder.

When he came into the Senate they sofe to him, and with a prerended joint Petition for a Banish'd Man, the Affassius press'd about him, as soon as he was Seated: He severally check'd their Importunity, but while they were thus employ'd, one of 'em gave the Sign by throwing his Robe over his Neck; another oppress'd with the Grandeur of the Attempt, made at him an irresolute Pass: He briskly opposed the Villain, and call'd him fo; They all rush'd on him with drawn Ponyards, still he relisted 'till he law Brutus coming on, then with a generous and disclainful Refignation, yielded to the stroke of a Pardon'd. Oblig'd and Rewarded Friend. But there are in England a Race of Men, who have this Action in the most profess'd Veneration, and who speciously miscall the Rancour, Malice and Hatred of all Happier and Higher than themselves, (which they have in common with Cassis) Gallantry of Mind, Distant of Servitude, and Passion for publick Good, which they pretend to with Bruter; and thus qualified with Ill, fet up for Faction, Business and Emmity to Kings. But 'tis to be hop'd these Men only run round 'till they're giddy, and when all things turn too, fancy themselves Authors of the Motion about 'em, and so take their Vertigo for their Force; for fure they have a futile Pretence to a good publick Spirit, who have an ill private One.

But there lies the Mighty Cafar, an Eternal Inflance how much too Generous and too Believing those unhappy Princes are, who depend upon the tie of Men's Obligations to 'em, without having their Opinions on their side; for nothing hinders a Min's walking by the Principles of his Soul, but; an Oppostunity to exert 'em; when that occurs, the fecret Enemy throws off his Mask, and draws his Degree.

Yet Reflections of this nature are somewhat foreign to our Purpose, we must therefore follow these bloody Men, to a Fate as violent as they gave their Benefactor; for 'twas in Providence to frustrate their Counsels, by turning that Virtue to their Ruin, which they had ensured for their Protection. The fearless Brutas had too much Clemency, to make this Blow safe by the Execution of the nearest Adherents to Cosar; His Safety consisted in his unbiased Mind and undaunted Resolution, which would not has him stoop to the taking away any Lifebelow that of the greatest of Mankind.

However this Injury was repair'd to Cefar, for he was voted a God in the very Place where he ceas'd to be a Man, which had been a good faving Claufe, cou'd they have perfuaded his Successor Octavius also to have been contented with Omnipotence; but the young Scholar was so much enameur'd with this world, that he left his Book to disturb and rule it; and to compass his End, took upon him the hopeful Resolution of sparing no Man, from a Restection perhaps that his Uncle was ruin'd by Mercy in his victories.

But it is not our Business, to fall into an Historical Account of the various Occurrences, which happen'd in the War between the Casarian Army and that of the Conspirators, any further than it is necessary for judging how far the Principles they walk'd by were useful to 'em in their greatest Extremities. As Bruss one Evening sate Pensive and Revolving, the Passages of Lite, and the Memory of Casari, occurr'd to him, now perhaps not as a Traitor, a Tyrant, or Usurper, but as one he Lov'd, and Murder'd; an Apparition appear'd (or he thought appear'd) pear of to him) which told him he was his Evi Gerius, and would meet him at 2 happs, to which he calmly answer'd, I'll meet the there: But he communicated a fed Imprefion which this made upon him to Calfies, who in in Ellenger manner gave him to Caffies, who in an Epicerus manner gave him a Superficial Comfort, by Discourferor the Illufions, our Fancies, our Dreams, and our Sorrows Imprint upon the Mind, and make as imaginary a real Torment. Yet the Night before the Fatal Batal he erquired (in case of a Defeat) his Resolution as to Flight and Death. To which Brutts:

When I was Young, Case Vid. of. Duke's "fins, and unskilful in Af-Translation of the "fairs, I was Engaged I know Life of Brutus. Plat. - "not how into an Opinion of Philotophy, which made "me accuse Cate for killing himself, as think- ing it an Irreligious Act against the Gods, nor "any ways Vallant amongst Men, not to submit "To Division Translation.

"to Divine Providence, nor be able featlefly to

"ceive and undergo whatever shall happen; but " to My fram it: But now in the midft of Dangers

"I am quite of another Mind, for if Providence what I now undertake according " to our Willies, I reloive to try no farther Hopes, " nor make any more Preparations for War, but

" will Die contented with my Fortune, for I already have given up my Life to the Service of my Country on the lifes of March, and all the time

" that I Lived fince, has been with Liberty and " Honour.

However Gallant this Speech may feem at first Sight, it is upon Reflection a very mean one; for he urges no manner of Reason for his Defertion of the noble Principle of Relignation to the Divine Will, but his Dangers and Diffrefles, which indeed is no more than if he had plainly Confess d, that Compos'd and Prosperous Condition, when we carre to be opperfied with Calamities, vanish from us, and are but the Effects of Insuriant Ease and good Humour, and languish and die away with 'em: But to make this a fair Deduction from this Discourse, let us Impartially (but with Tenderness and Pity) look at him in his last Panga: At the Battel of Philippi, Brunes Commanded the Right, Callins the Lest of the Line: The first broke the opposite Wing of the Enemy, the second was himself forc'd. But by a Failure in their Orders and Intelligence, each was Ignorant of the other's Fortune; Brutus follow'd his Blow, and his Heat drove him too far before he thought of Cassius, whom at last with a strong Detachment, he returns to relieve. His Friend Retreated to a rising Ground, to View and Bewail the Fate of their Cause, and Commanded an Officer to observe that Body marching towards him: The Gentleman soon found 'em Friends, and considering Rid in amongst'em; they as kindly enclosed him to enquire News Upon seeing this, the miserable Cassius concluded him taken by the Enemy, and giving all for lost, retir'd into a Tent, where he was by his own Order kill'd by a Servant.

Here Brutus, whom neither the Fondness of so excellent Wife, Obligations to a generous Friend, or a Message from the Dead could Divert from meeting all Encounters, links and falls into the most extream Despair.

He, with some others that escap'd the Pursuit, retir'd to a Thicket of a Wood, where also finding they were trac'd, 'twas propos'd still to Fly: But he, after having express'd a Satisfaction (but a salse one, since he could not live with it) in his Integrity, which he preserr'd to the Successes of his Enemies, ran upon his Sword, and transfix'd that great great Heart with a superfinous Blow, which sure was before Stabb'd with the killing Reflection up-

温度性效应

Here let us throw a Veil over this miftaken Great. Man, and if possible cover him from Human Sight for ever, that his feder'd and Ambigues. Virtue may be no more Prophen'd, as an Umbrage to the Counsels of Perjur'd Friends, Sacrilegious Regicides, and implacable Defressions.

implicable Desp

Now the use we make of these Resections, is, that since we have seen the mighty Case himself fall into Superstition at the Thought of his Exit, since Case's sirm Constancy, Bruttu his generous Zeal, and Cassis his steady Malice, all ended in the same Deteliction of themselves, and Despondence at last, we may justly conclude, that whatever Law we may make to our selves, from the Greatness of Nature or the Prin-ciples of Philosophy for the Conduct and Regulation of Life, is it felf but an Artificial Passion, by which we vainly hope to fubdue those that a tural, and which will certainly rife or fall withour Disappointment or Success, and we that are liable to both are highly concern'd to be prepar'd for either;
At which Perfection there is no nearer way to arrive, but by attending our own Make, and observing by what means human Life, from its simple and rural Happiness, swell'd into the weighty Cares and Distractions with which it is at present Enchanted; and from this Knowledge of our Mifery, Extract our Satisfaction. are a second and the second and the

The second of the second of the second of the second of to J. M. J. C. J. Guerry and J. S. Mir and S. Yu. I. a sale designation of the second and particles and call party of the and more party in the time that the CHAP.

AN is a Creature of fo mix'd a Composure, and of a Frame so In-consistent and Different from 115 felf, that it easily speaks his Affi-nity to the highest and meanest Beings: that is to say, he is made of Body and Soul, he is at once an Engine and an Engineer: The indeed both that Body and Soul act in many Instances separate and independent of each other: For when he Thinks. ons and Concludes, he has not in all that Work the least Assistance from his Body: His finest Fibres, purest Blood, and highest Spirits are as brute and different from a Capacity of Thinking as his very Bones; and the Body is so mere a Machine, that it Hungers, Thirsts, Tastes and Digests, without any exerted Thought of the Mind to command that Operation: Which when he observes upon himself, he may, without deriving it from Vapour, Fumeor Diflemper, believe that his Soul may as well Exist out of, as in that Body from which it borrows nothing to make it capable of performing its most perfect Functions. This may give him hopes, that the his Trunk return to its native Dust he may not all perish, but the Inhabitant of it may remove to another Mansion; especially since he knows only Mechanically that they have, not Demonstratively how they have, even a present Union.

And fince this Mind has a Consciousness and Superior Reflection upon its own Being and Actions, and that Thoughts flow inupon it, from it knows ceive, that there is iomething of a Nature like it lelf, which may, Imperceptibly, act upon it, and where it cannot deduct its real-bable Performances from any corporeal Beginning, draw Hopes or Fears from some Being thus capable to Impress Pleasure or Torment, which Being it cannot but suppose its

But this its Author is Incomprehensible to the Soul (which he has thought fit to imprison in Sense beflow upon it an Expectation of its Enlargement; yet were we to take the Account which Poetical Writers give, and suppose a Creature with these Endowments wandring among other wild Animals, the Intelligent Savage would not be contented with what Rapine or Craft could gain from his Brethren Beafts, but his Condition would still be as necessifications for his better Part; and his dark natural Enquiry would make hum, for want of a more just Knowledge of his Creater, all into Superstation, and believe every Fountain, Grove and Forest inhabited by some occuliar Deity, that bestow'd upon Mankind the Stream, the Shade, and the Breeze.

But we are inform'd that the avonderful Creator of all Things, after he had given the Rivers to Flow, the Earth to bring Forth, and the Beasts to Flow, faw and approved his Work, but thought a and Master) but as he is pleas'd to reveal Feed, faur and approved his Work, but thought a Dumb. Brute and Mechanick. World an imperfect Creation full inhabited by aconfcious Being, whole Happiness thould conside in Obedience to, and a Contemplation on, Him and his Wonders.

For this Reason Man was created with intellectual Powers and higher Faculties; who immediately beheld with Joy and Rapture, a World made for the Support and Admiration of his new Being; how came

me he into this happy happy State! whence the Order! the Beauty! the Melody of this Living Garden! Are the Trees Verdant? Do the Birds Sing Do the Fountains Flow for no other Realon but to Delight and Entertain him? How does he parthrough the most bright and delicious Objects, and through the most bright and delicious Objects, and how does he Barn to utter himself upon the Bellatick Morious which they give him! In such sweet Inquierude were the first Hours of the World frent and in this Laffaude of Blifs and Thought our Parent fell into a profound Sleep, when his Maker who knew bow irksome a lonely Happinels wasto a fociable Nature, form'd out of his Side a Companion, Woman: He awak'd, and by a fecres Simpathy beheld his Wife: He beheld his own rougher Make forten'd into Sweetness, and temper'd into Smiles: He law a Creature (who had as 'twere Heav'ns fecond Thought in her Formation) to whom he could communicate his Conceptions, on whom he could Glus his Eyes, with whom he could Raet: Over this Confort his Strength and vito his tele Wildom claim'd, but his Affection relign'd the Superiority: These both Equal and both Superior were to live in perfect Tranquility, and produce as happy a Progeny: The Earth and all its Fruits were theirs, Except only one Tree: Which light Injundies was all that was require of em as an Inflance of their Obedience and Gratitude to His Bounty, given em every thing elfe. But fuch was their Vanity and Ingratitude, that they foon forgot endance fultable to a borrow'd Being, and wese deluded into an empty Hope of becoming I their Transgression like their Creator, and (the inft Born of the Duft) proud enough from that No-Exiffence to dildsin one that was Precarious: The did therefore Lat and were Undone; they offer God, and like all their fuceceding Criminals against him.

d

i

Ú-

7-

Ç.

by

nd

70

to

t a

ca

ofe

on-

tu-

ely

for

ow

This is the Account we have from a certain neplected Book, which is call'd, and for its genuine Excellence above all other Books defervedly call'd.
THE SCRIPTURE: And methinks we may be convinc'd of the Truth of this Hiftory of our Parents, by the infallible Spots and Symptoms of their Hereditary Disease in our Tempers, Pride and Ingratitude: For what is more natural to us, than by an unreasonable Self-Opinion, (tho' we cannot but feel that we are but mere Creatures and not of our selves) to assume to our selves the Praise and Glory of our Capacities and Endowments! and how Lazy; how Unwilling are we to Eradicate the deep and inward Satisfaction of Self-admiration? However, it must be confess'd, that 'its the most sense less and stupid of all our Infirmities, for 'till you can remember and recount to us, when that Thinking, Throbbing Particle within, first resolv'd to Wear a lody, when it spun out its Arteries, Fibres and Veins, contriv'd the warm circulating Stream that runs through 'em, when you first ventur'd to let the Heart pant, the Lungs suck Air, and at last to lanch the whole tender Machine into the hazard of Motion; 'till, I say, you can acquaint us with all this,

this, you must kneel and fall down before him, by whom you were thus Fearfully and Wonderfully

Made.

But the first Pair, now suspicious of each other, bunish'd the more immediate lusticence and Presence of their Almighty Protector, were liable (Naked and Distress'd as they were) to be entangled by the Thorn and the Brier, and torn by the Lion and Wolf, who have ever since been prompted to fly in the Faces of the detested Ingrates: Therefore the increasing World, for their Defence against Themselves and other Animals, were obliged to go into Contracts and Policies, so that human Life (by long Gradation) ascended into an Art: The Tongue was now to Utter one thing, and the Bosom to Conceal another; and from a defire of Superiority in our depray'd Natures, was bred that unsatisfied Hanger; Ambition a monstrous Excrescence of the Mind, which makes Superfluity, Riches, Honour and Di-Ambition; a monfirous Excrescence of the Mind, which makes Superfluity; Riches, Honour and Diffinction, but mere Necessities of Life, as if twere our Fate in our fallen Condition (left a Supply of what frugal Nature defires should be obtained) to find out an Indigence foreign to us, which is incapable of being relieved, and which (to confirm our Want and Misfery) increases with its Acquisitions: Under this leading Crime, are Envy, Harred, Cruselry, Cunning, Crast, and Debate, Muster'd and Armid; and a Battalion of Difeases, Torments and Cares, the natural Effects of those Evils. and Cares, the natural Effects, of those Evils, become our Bosom Companions, from which no Arms can rescue, no Flight secure us, but a Return to that God, in whose Protection only is our Native lost Seat of Rest and Tranquility. To which Abode since our Expulsion we cannot dare to appreach, but Guilt which runs even to Succours it knows vain, makes us, with our first Parents in the fime Circumstances, hide from Omnipotence Children.

faid in the fame Circumstances, for we have not only implicitly committed their Crime, as we were in them, but do also actually repeat it in our own Perlons: For when a Created Being relinquishes the Power of its Creater, and instead of relying on his Conduct and Government, draws to it fell an independent Model of Life, what does it but pluck from the Tree of Knowledge, and attempt a Thefe of Market Caretine from the Tree of Knowledge, and attempt a Thefe of Understanding, from him who is Wildom it felf? This is a tremendous Consideration, yet is there not that him breathing, who has any where placed his Considerate but in Gost, and considerate feriously his own Heart, but feels its Weight, nor can the Dosons under it receive any Impression, but that of

But behold the Darkness different, and there is fill Hope breaking in upon our Sorrow, by the Light of which we may again lift up our Eyes and fee our Meker: For in the midfl of our deferved Mifery, our Retonciliation is coming outhrough a Mediator, who is perfectly unconcern d in our Grime. But the innocent of our Transgression, assume that and our Nature, and, as an Atomement for us, offers his Life a Ransom, with this regard on our Part, that so it is an Expinsion, it is also an Exam-ple: An Example to infirmed us, that not only the first Command laid upon us was a reasonable one, but also the present Life case and supportable, for he himself voluntarily undergoes it in its greatest Ca-lamities. He who had all things in his Power, and wanted all things, by inforcing an abilinear use of Weslith, and partent endering of Poverty, reflores us not only to the Bills of leading this Life with Satiffaction and Refignation to the Divine Will (which only is our true Life) but by a fhort Passage thro' a momentary Death, translates us to an happy everlaffing Existence, incapable of Sorrow, Weariness or Change:

Change: To accomplish which great Revolution, our gorious Deliverer from our selves design'd to establish his Empire, not by Conquest, but a Right much more lasting. Ardons and Indisputable Conviction; for our Slavery being Intellectual and in our own Bosoms, the Redemption must be there also, Yet the World, Inchanted withints own imaginary Notions of Freedom, knew not how to receive so Abstracted a Manumission, but contemn'd the Promise of Restoration to Life and Liberty, from a poor Man who himself enjoy'd none of the Advantages which arise from those Dear (but Missonder stood) Appellations.

himfelf enjoy'd none of the Advantages which arise from those Dear (but Missederstood) Appellations.

May we then without Blame approach and behold this secred and Miraculous Life? How, also I shall we trace the Mysterious Steps of God and Man? How consider him at once in Subjection to,

and Dominion over Nature?

The more Apposite (tho most slow) Method of reducing the World to its Obedience, was that our Blessed Saviour should appear in the despicable Attite which he did, without any of those attendant Accidents which attract the Eye, and charm the Imagination: For the Knowledge which he was to Introduce, being an Eternal Truth; the proper Mansion for it was in the Reason and Judgment, into which when it had once enter'd, it was not to be removed by any Impressions upon the Lower Faculties, to which it was not to be beholden for a Reception. There is not therefore one Instance in the New Testament of Power exerted to the Destruction, tho' so many to the Preservation of Mankind: But to a degenerate Race, he that Heals, is less valued than he that Kills: Consumon, Terror, Noise and Amazement, are what only strike service Minds; but Order. Simmetry, filent Awe, Blessings and Peace are Allurements to the Open, Simple, Ianocent and Truly Knowings yet the very Nation among whom the Holy Jefus Descended to Converse, had (If we may so speak) in a manner tir'd Heav'n with appearing in the more pompous Demonstrations of its Power: They pass'd through Wayes Divided and Erest for their March, they were supernaturally Fed in a Wilderness, a Mountain shook, and Thunder utter'd their Law; Nations were destroy'd to gain them Inheritance! But they foon forgot their Benefits, and upon the least Cessation of Fear and Miracle, they deserted their Creator, and return'd to their own Handywork Deities, who were as fenfelels of their Makers, as themselves were of theirs.

Thus hort-liv'd is Wonder, and thus Impotent to fix (what we have faid our Law-giver delign'd) Conviction. For which Reason our Astonishment in the New Testament is more sparingly rais'd, and that only to awaken our Attention to Plain, Easie, and Obvious Truths (which support themselves when received) by the Authority of Miracles.

We Read that he was led into a Matt. 4. Wilderness, where he wonderfully bore Hunger and Want for Forty Days in the height of which Exigence and Ne-cessity, the Tempter came to him and Urg'd him, if he were the Son of God, to Relieve his present Misery, by turning the Stones into Bread; which Attempt when he tound Fruitless, and ob-ferv'd that he would Use no supernatural Relief, but bear Human Nature and its Infirmities, he Attacks him the most acceptable way to our Weakness in the Supplies of Pride and Vanity: He showed him the Kingdoms and Glory of the World, (which he had Purchased from Man by his Desection from God) and offer d him the Dominion of em if he would Worship him; but our Lord contemn'd this alfo, and in his Want and Poverty retird into a private private Village; where and in the adjacent Parts if the Necessitous Man lay in Obscurity, the Merciful God did not, for he never discontinued his Visible benign Assistance, to the Relief of the Disea'd, the Possess and the Tormented.

In his admirable Sermon upon the Mar. 5. Mount, he gives his Divine Precepts in so easie and familiar a manner; and which are so well adapted to all the Rules of Life and right Reason, that they must needs carry throughout a self-evident Authority to all that Read emisto those that Obey em. from the firm Sarisfa Cla to those that Obey 'em, from the firm Satisf on which they Inspire; to those that neglect 'cm, from the Anxiety that naturally attends a contrary Practice: There is the whole Heart of Man discovered by him that Made it, and all our Man discovered by him that Made it, and all our secret Impulses to Ill, and salle Appearances of Good, exposid and detected: Among other excellent Doctrines, one which methinks must be, to those who are so harden'd as to read the Divine Oracles with Unbelief, an irrefragable Argument of his Divinity: But when thou Projest, onter into they Closes, and Matt. 6, 6, when thou bust shut his in Secret, and they Father which seth in Secret, shall reward Thee openly. Now it cannot enter into the Heart of Man, that any but Good, could be the Author of a Command to but God could be the Author of a Command fo abstracted from all worldly Interest; for how abford were it in a Being, that had not an Intercourfe with our Souls, or knew not their most fecret Mo-tions, to direct our Application to it felf, to strictly apart, and out of the Observation of any Powerless than Ubiquitary?

There came to him a Captain, in Mat. 8. the behalf of his Servant, grievoully tormented with a Pallie: Our Lord promis'd him him to come and heal him a law the Soldier (with an Opennals and Sincerity of Mind peculiar to his Profession) who could not believe in, or serve him, but with his whole Heart told him, he know Nature was in his Power with a despotick a Subjection, as his Men were under his begg'd him only to speak him whole, and he know he would be so: Our Swigur extall'd his honest, frank and unreserved Considence, gave him a suitable Success, sending him away with this Glorious Exlogium, that he had not found such Faith, no not in Iseal.

Thus did he bestow Mercy and Saluttion upon the case and common terms of ordinary Briendship, as if there needed nothing to make him; but believing he would be, their Benefactor. And who, in the least Affairs, is a Friend to him that distrusts him? In plain and apt Parable, Simi-Matt. 13. 55, litude and Allegory, he proceeded daily to impire and inforce the Dockrine of our Salvetion; but they of his Acquaintance, instead of secessing what they could not oppose, were offended at the Fresamption, of being writer than they: Is not this the Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary, his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Received that he Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his Received that he Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his the Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his the Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his the Carpenter's Son, is not his Mother called Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his the Carpenter's Son, is not his his called the Carpenter's Son, is not his Mary his Brethren, Famer, Is not his mark the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son, is not his his result of the Carpenter's Son Conceptions.

Multitudes follow'd him, and brought Matt. 17. him the Dumb, the Blind, the Sick and Main; whom when their Creator had Touch'd, with a fecund Life they Saw, Spoke, Leap'd and Ran; in Affection to him, and Admiration of him Actions, the General could not leave him, but writed near him Three Days, 'vill they were almost as frint and belylefs as exhers they brought for Succour; He had compassion on 'em, commanded lem to be feated, and with Seven Loaver, and a few slittle little, Fed four thouland Men, hefides Women and Children. Oh the Echatick Entertainment, when they would behald their Rood immediately increases to their Distributer's Hand, and fee their God in Person Feeding and Refreshing his Creatures: Oh Roosed Happinesses Bur why do I say Environas if our Good God and not fill pectide over our temperate Meals, cheatful Hours, and innocent Conversations.

But the 'the facted Story is every where full of Mincles, not inferior to this, and the in the midst of these Acts of Divinity, he never gave the least him of a Design red secome a Secular Prince, or in a Barcible or Uttraculous manner to east off the form Yales they were under, and restore again that Disgrared Savourities of Means, to its former and againethed Disgrared Savourities of Means, to its former and sensor, yet that not his hatural Pride) my other than hopes of Worldly Power, Preference, Riches and Bomp; For Peter, who it seems ever since he left his Net and his Skiff, Dreamt of nothing but heing a great Man, was utterly undone to hear our Saviour explain to 'em, upon an Accident of Ambrion among 'cm, that his Kingdom was not of this World; and was so feandaiz'd, that the Ignominy, Shatpe and Death which he forestold, that he took him aside and faid, the Ignomiay, Shame and Death which he fore-told, that he took him afide and faid,

He it far from thee, Lord, this Shall Mat. 16, 22, ter's severe Reprehension from his Master, as having. ving in his View the Glory of Man, rather than that of God.

The great Charac of things began to draw near, when the Lord of Samre thought fit as a Saviour and Deliverer to make his publish Entry into Yora-Jalon, with more than the Power and Joy, but none of the Oftentation and Romp of a Triumph: He came Humble, Mask and Lowly; with an unfelt new Ecffafie, Multitudes frow'd his way with Garments and Olive-branches, crying with loud Gladrefs and Acctanation. Holamah Mat. 21. to the Son of David. Blaffet is to that comets in the Name of the Lord! At this great King's Accession to the Throne, Men were not Ennobled out Sav'd; Crimes were not Remitted, but Sins Forgiven; he did not bestow Medals, Honours, Favours, but Health, Joy, Sight, Speech! The first Object the Blind ever fave, was the Author of Sight, while the Lame ran lasore, and the Dumb repeated the fiolamah! Thus attended, he Entred into his own House, the Sacred Temple, and by his Divine Authority Expell'd Traders and Worldings that Prophan'd it; and thus did he, for a time, use a great and despotick Power, to let Unhelievers under thand, that 'twas not want of, but Superiority to, all Worldly Dominion, that made him not exert it; But is this then the Saviour, is this the Deliveren's final this Obscure Natarine command Is and fit in the Throne of David! Such were the unpleasant Forms that ran in the Thoughts of the then Powerful in Jerusalem, upon the most Truly Glorious Entry that over Prince made; for there was not one that tollow'd him, who was not in his Interest; their Broud and Disdainful Hearts, which were Putrified with the Love and Pride of this World, were impregnable to the Reception of so mean a Benefactor, and were now enough exasperated with Benefits Benefactor, and were now enough exasperated with Benefits

Benefits to Conspire his Death: Our Lord was sensible of their Design, and prepar'd his Disciples for it, by recounting to 'em now more distinctly what should befall him; but Peter with an ungrounded Resolution, and in a Flush of Temper, made a Sanguine Protestation; that the'

all Men were offended in him, yet Matt. 26. 33would not be be offended. It was a great Article of our Saviour's Business in the World, to bring us to a Sense of our Inability, without God's Affistance, to do any thing Great or Good; he therefore told Peter, who thought so well of his Courage and Fidelity, that they would both fall him, and ev'n he should deny him Thrice that very Night.

2

d

y

25

h

d,

1

th

But what Heart can conceive, what Tongue utter the Sequel? Who is that yonder Buffeted, Mock'd and Spurn'd? Whom do they Drag like a Felon? Whither do they carry my Lord, my King, my Saviour and my God? And will he Die to expiate those very Injuries? See where they have Nail'd the Lord and Giver of Life! How his Wounds blacken! His Body writhes and Heart heaves with Pity, and with Agony! Oh Almighty Sufferer, look down, look down from thy Triumphant Infamy; Lo he inclines his Head to his Sacred Bosom! Hark he Groans, see he Expires! The Earth trembles, the Temple rends, the Rocks buff, the Dead Arise; Which are the Quick? Which are the Dead? Sure Nature, all Nature is departing with her Creator.

mention and translation of the latest and the thin ashieres can be a read and beaution

the Sick, with this Difference only, that his is a CRAP.

The Christian Hero.

ISANIESTE TENTONERA

CHAP. III.

HERE was nothing in our Saviour's own Deportment, or in the Principles He introduced for our Conduct, but what was to fir from Oppoing, that they might naturally fall in with the Statutes or

Forms of any Civil Government whatever, and regarded 'em no otherwise than to make us more Obedient to 'em: Yet the Professors of this Doctrine were told they were to meet but very little Quarter, for the acceptable Service they were to do 'em, but must lay down their yery Lives to bring Us to a Contempt of their Grandeur in Comparison of Greater and Higher Durshits: In order to this Great End, their Despiceable Artillery were Poverty and Meeknels, the confidenation therefore of those Arms is no Disordinon from our Purpose: It is in every Body's Observation with what Disadvantage a Poor Man saters upon the most Ordinary Assars, much more desputing with the whole World and incontrassiction of the Risch, that is, the Wife; for as certainly as Wealth give Acceptance and Grace to all that its Possessor and Prejudice to all the Undertakings of the Indigent: The Necessatous Man has neither Hands, Lips, or Understanding, for his own or Friend's use, but is in the same condition with the Sick, with this Difference only, that his is an Insection no Man will Relieve, or Assist, or if he does, the seldom with so much Pity, as Contempt, and rather for the Oftentation of the Phylician, than Compassion on the Patient: It is a Circumstance, wherein a Man finds all the Good he deferves inaccessible, all the III unavoidable; and the Poor Hero is as certainly Ragged, as the Poor Viller, and the Poor hin Hang'd: Under these Pressures the Poor Man speaks with Hadication undertakes with sweld's in ou, and acts with Disappointment: He is slighted in Mens Conversations, overlook'd in their Assemblies, and besten at their Doors: But trom whende also has he this Treatment? from a Greature that his only the Supply of, but not an Exemption from the Wants, for which he despites him: For such is the unaccountable infoience of Man; that he will not see that he who is supported, is an the same Class of natural Necessity with him that wants a Support; and to be help'd, implies to be indigent. In a Word, after all you can say of a Man, conclude that he is Rich, and you have made him Friends; nor have you atterly overthrown a dan in the World's Opinion, till you have faid he is Poor; This is the Emphatical Expression of Praise and Blame, for Men so stupidly forget their natural impotence and Want, that Riches and Poverty have taken in our Imagination the place of Innocence. lain Hang'd: Under thele Pressures the Poor Main Impotence and Want, that Riches and Poverty have taken in our Imagination the place of Innocence and Guilt; he therefore that has fuffer'd the Contumelies, Difappointments and Miferies which attend the Poor Man's Condition, and without running into bale, indecent or fervile Arts for his reducts, bath return'd upon an infolent World site Scorn, He (I fay) has fought a nobler Fight, Conque'd greater Difficulties, and deferves a brighter Disdem, than ever Fortune beflow'd on the most fonded and most gaudy of her Favourites; But to capaciate ones felf for this hard Work, how needing is that Sublime and Heroick Virtue, Meskinsis, a virtue which seems the very Characteristick of a C 2.

Christian, and arises from a great, not a groveling Idea of things: For as certainly as Pride proceeds from a mean and narrow view of the little Advantages about a Man's Ielf, so Meckness is founded on the extended Contemplation of the Place we bear in the Universe, and a just Observation how little, how empty, how wavering are our deepeff Resolves and Councils; and as (to a well taught Mind) when you've said an Hsuphty and Proud Man, you have spoke a narrow Conception, little Spirit, and despicable Garriage; so when you've said a Man's Meek and Humble, you've acquainted us, that such a Person has arriv'd at the hardest Task in the World in an universal Observation round him, to be a wish to see his own Faults and other Men. in the World in an universal Observation round him, to be quick to see his own Faults and other Mens Virtues, and at the height of pardoning every Man sooner than himself; yet you've also given us to understand, that to treat him kindly, fincerely and respectfully, is but a mere Justice to him that's ready to do us the same Offices: This Temper of Soul keeps us always awake to a just Sense of things, teaches us that we are as well akin to Worms as to Angels, and as nothing is above these, so is nothing below those: It keeps our Understanding tight about us, so that all things appear to us great or little as they are in Nature, not as they are gilded or fellied by Accident and Fortune.

Alittle as they are in Nature, not as they are gilded or sallied by Accident and Fortune.

Meckness is to the Mind, what a good Mein is to the Body, without which, the best Limb'd and finest Complection'd Person may be very Disagree-ble; and with it, a very Homely and Plain one cannot be so; for a good Air supplies the Impersonance of Festure and Shape, by throwing a certain Beauty on the whole, which covers the disagreeableness of the Parts; it has a State and Humility peculiar to it sale and Record, where the high-colliness are the sale and Record and Record are the sale are the sale and Record are the sale are the sale are the sale and Record are the sale are the s en things are expressed in the most case Terms, and which carries throughout a condescending Explanation, and a certain Meckness of Stile.

With this Circumstance, and this ready Virtue, the faithful Followers of a Crucify'd Master were to shape their Course to an Eternal Kingdom, and with that in Prospect to contemn the hazards and diffilters of a Cruel and Impenitent Generation. Great were the Actions and Sufferings of all our Bleffed Saviour's Apostles, but St. Paul being peculiarly sent to Us who were or are Gentiles, he methinks more particularly challenges our regard: God who bestow'd upon others supernaturally the Gift of Tongues, but not of Arts, thought therefore sit use of him, already Master in some mea fure of both, and qualified to converse with the politer World by his Acquaintance with their Stueles, Laws and Cuftoms: But tho' he shows himfelf by frequent brisk Sallies and quick Interrogatories, skilful in approaching the Passions by Rhetorick, yet he is very modest in any of those Ornaments, and strikes all along at the Reason, where he never fails to convince the attentive and unprejudic'd, and tho' his Person was very despicable (which to a Stranger is almost an insuperable Inconvenience) yet such was the Power of the Commanding Truth which he utter'd, and his Skill how and when to utterir, that there every where appears in his Character, either the Man of Business, the Gentleman, the Hero, the Apostle, or the Martyrs; which Eminence above the other Apostles might well be expected from his Sanguine and Undertaking Complexion, temper'd by Education, and quickned by Grace: Tis true indeed, he had Oppos'd in the most Outragious and Violent manner this new Faith, felf by frequent brisk Sallies and quick Interrogatomost Outragious and Violent manner this new Faith, and was accessary to the Murder of the glorious leader of the Army of Martyrs, St. Stephen; but C'3. that

d

.

6-

that fierce Disposition fell off with the Scales from his Eyet; and God, who ever repards the Intention, chang'd his mishaken Method of serving him, and he is now ready to promote the same Religion by his Sufferings, which before he would have Excitrented by his Persecutions. He and his Companion had made very great Progress in the Conversion both of sews and Gentiles, but certain Unbelievers Prompted the Multitude to a session both of sews and Gentiles, but certain Unbelievers Prompted the Multitude to a session of several Assembly to Assembly to Assembly to the second of it field ubto Lyesmin, where their Assembly to Assembly survey Successful; but at Lysman and Eloquence were very Successful; but at Lysman and Walked. This Miracle ulurn'd the whole City, who believed their Gods had delicanded in Flumin Shapes; Bastassa was immediately Yves, and Taul his Markey. The Priest of Tailor now is coming to Sacrifice to 'em with Own and Gariands: but Ver. 15. they ran into the Multitude; We are Much his Markey of the large and Eloquence are subject to the same Weaknels, Instructive, and Pussions with Deity, but his lent us with Instances of the great things our selves were and sole; your and unt Caestor will do longer for you wander in the Marke and Error of your Valvices and false Noticus of his Deity, but his lent us with Instances of his Omnipotence to avake you to a Werthip worthy him, and worthly your only his Vehementee, his Power and his Eloquence are too feeble when they are arguet against thumlelves; for with Prayers and and Entresties the Crowd could hardly be prevailed upon to forbear their Adoration, But this Applaule, like all other, was but a mere Gust, for the Malice of certain Jews follow'd em from Iconium, and quickly infinuated into the giddy Multitude as-much Rancour as they had before Devotion; who in a Tumultuary manner Ston'd St. Paul, and drag'd him' as Dead out of the Gates of the City; but he bere their Affronts with much less Indignation than their Worlbip: Here was in a trice the highest and lowest condition, the most respectful and most insolent treatment that Man could receive; but Chri-Risnity, which kept his Eye upon the Caufe not lifeth of his Actions, (and always gives us a tran-tion regard to transitory things,) depress'd him when dor'd, evalted him when Affronted.

But these two excellent Men, tho' they had the contents of Fellow Suffering, and their Friend-

Indearments of fellow Suffering, and their Friendship heightned by the yet faster tie of Religion, could not longer accompany each other, but upon a Dispute about Alists. v. 398 taking Mark with em, who it seems had before deserted em, their Dissention grew to the highest a Resentment between Generous Friends ever can, even to part and estrange em: But they did it without Rancour, Malice, or perhaps Dis-esteem of each other; for God has made us whether we observe it at the instant of made us, whether we observe it at the instant of being to or not, to much instruments of his great and secret Purposes, that he has given every individual Man, I know not what peculiarly his own, which so much distinguishes him from all other Persons, that 'tis impossible, fometimes, for two of the same generous Resolutions, Honesty and Integrity to do well together, whether it be that Promore, or whatever it is, fuch is the frequent etfeet.

fect. For these noble Personages were forced to take different Ways, and in those were eminently useful in the same Cause, as you may have seen two Chymical Waters, assunder, thining and transparent, thrown together, muddy and offenfite.

The Apossile was warn'd in a Vision Adis 16. to go into Macedonia, whither he and his now Companion Silas accordingly went: At Philippi he commanded an Evil Spirit to depart out of a Young Woman; but her Master (to whom her Distraction was a Revenue, which ceas'd by her future Inability to answer the Demands usually made to her,) with the ordinary method of hiding private Malice in publick Zeal, rais'd the Multitude upon 'em, as Disturbers of the publick Peace, and Innovaters upon their Laws and Libertics: The Multitude hurry'd 'em to the Magistrates, who happening to be as wise as themselves, commanded 'em to be Stripp'd, Whipp'd, and clapp'd in Goal: The Keeper receiving very strict Orders for their safe Custody, put 'em in Irons in the Dungeon; the abus'd Innocents had now no way left for their Redress, but applying to their God, who, when all Human Arts and Forces fail, is ready for our Relief, nor did St. Paul on less Occasions implore praternatural Assistance;

* Nec Deus intersit nisi dignus vindice Nodus Inciderit

Let not a God appprach the Scene,
In cases for a God too Mean.

[.] Horace's General Epiftle to the Pilos', Verfe 105.

We must, to Men of Wit and Gallantry, quote out of their own Scriptures. Their Generous way of Devotion, and begging Assistance, was giving Thanks for their present Extremities: In the midst of their Sores and Chains, they Sang Hymns and Praises to their Creator: Immediately the Bolts. flew, the Manacles fell off, the Doors were open-ed, and the Earth shook: The Goaler awakes in Terrour, and believing all under his Custody escap'd went to dispatch himself; but St. Paul calls to him. he comes and beholds his Prisoners detain'd by nothing but their amazing Liberty; the Horror, Sor-row, Torture, and Despair of a Dungeon, turn'd in-to the Joy, the Rapture, the Hallehajah, the Ecstafie of an Heav'n; He fell Trembling at the Apofiles Feet, refign'd himself to his Captives, and felt in himself the happy Exchange of his Liberty, for that Yoke in which alone is perfect Freedom. Early the next Morning, upon this stupendious oc-casion, the Magistrates sent Orders those Men might be Releas'd: But St. Paul, who knew he had Law on his fide, and that his being a Prisoner made him not the less a Gentleman and a Roman, scorn'd their pretended Favour, nor would regard their Meffage, till they had themselves in as publick a manner acknowledg'd their Offence, as they had committed it, which they did by attending em in the Goal, and defiring in a Ceremonious manner they would leave the City; upon which the Apostic accepted his Inlargement, and when he had fettled what Bufiness he had Att 16. in that Town, left it and its Rulers to forget that painful Truth, which they had neither Power to gainly, nor Ingenuity to acknow-

or related to the contract of the

do lide

His

His taking leave of the Chief of the Ephylian

The taking leave of the Chief of the Epistan Churches, in hardly to be read without Teams, when when he laid reminded an Al Me Whole Diameleli. Diffuterenes, Humble, and Laborious Garinge, he acquaints am with his Refolution of poing to Territon and hever to return thether; he knew not he field, what would particularly beful him there, but that in general Addictions, Diffresses and Indignities were the Portion of his Life, which he was ready to hazard or by down in a Gause which has a certain Sweetness in its that can make a Man embrace his Chains and enjoy his Miteries, what could be answered to his gallant.

Declaration and Behaviour but what adds he 28. they did, who all wept five, and first on St. Paul's Neck, and Kiffed him: Sorrowing map of all for the Words which he finds, thus they fooled for his Face to more. Certain leves of afta were glad to be him again at Tansfaton, and mismid the City with their Personal Knowledge of his Carringe, to the disparagement of the Temple, and the Ritter of their Nation: Upon which he had been torn to Pieces, had he not been Relevial by the Commanding Minitary Officer there; of whom (going with him as a Pritoner into the Cartie) he obtained the Liberty of speaking to the People: They neard him with great Attention, 'till the contradicted their Monopoly of God; at which they loft all Order and Pattence. But Opposition was so far from dispiriting, that it did but quicken his Retoution; for his prest Heart, indeed of Rainting and Subading, rule and proportion to any growing Danse, that threathed him; however he is carry it to his imprisonment, but not ev'n there to be without debate, for he is by the Commander's Order to be Scourged, to which which tullus.

which he does not Peffively, or befely fubric, but affects his Roman Privilege, and Exemption from fuch Indignities.

Me was thereupon next Morning ought down to a Tryal by a Ads, cap. 19. open his very opening his Mouth, the Chief Priest commanded him to be struck, for which he calls him Hypocrite and false Pretender to Justice, who could use a Man, he was to fit as Judge of, to Inhumanly; but his good breeding being founded up-on no less a Sanction than the Command of God, he immediately Recollects himself, and acknowledges his Error and Diffespect to the Dignity of his Office: Yet observing (by this treatment from the Prefident of the Council) the usage he was to expect, by a very skilful turn he makes Friends in an Affembly unanimous in his Ruin, but in that only unanimous; for Pharifeer, in which Sect he was Bree composing part of the Court, he closes with their belief of a Refurrection, and there grounded the Cruelty he had met with among the Jews: This put 'em into fo great a Flame, that to fave him he was forcibly taken away into the place from whence he eame: His Enemies, gall'd to the quick at his Riespe Conspir'd to Kill him, when (upon the High Priest's Request) he should be remanded to a Tryal: A Nephew of the Apostle's acquainted him with this; he was neither afraid or amaz'd at the Intelligence, but like a Man of Business and the World, diferently and calmly order'd the Youth to be introduced to the Captain, whom he knew answerable for the Safety of his Priloner: The Officer in the Night fent him with a firong Party to Felix the Governor of the Province, and directed his Acquiers to follow him thither: Before Felix, one Tel-

Bribe, which was also, in very old Times, the way to the Favour of the Great, But Felix now leaving his Lieutenancy to Festis, this Friendless good Man was a proper Person for a Tool to his Vanity, by doing an obliging thing to the Jews, in leaving him still in Custody at his departure, and no less useful to his New Excellency to parture, and no less uterus to ma their be Sacrific'd to 'em upon his Entry : For at their be Sacrific'd to 'em upon his Entry : For at their brought to Jerufalem, (defignrequest to have him brought to fernjalen, (dengaing to dispatch him by the way) tho' he at first denied it, he afterwards proposed it to the Apostle himself, to have the liftue of his Tryalthere: But he handsomely evaded his base Condescention, and their as base Malice, by Appealing as a Roman to Casar himself, before whose Authority he also then stood: But he is still kept in Goal in the same state, request to have him brought to Fe to gratifie the Jews, till Agrippa the Terrarch of Galilee came to wait on Festus, who (after he had the st

mate

fo of St. Paul, and acquainted him that he was a sile what to do with him: He was fo Odious to the was the becar'd not to Pale. s loss what to do with him: He was so Odious to the Jews, that he can'd not to Enlarge him, and so linnocent in himself, that he knew not what Account to send with him to Rome: This mov'd Agrippuls Curiosity to hear him himself; in very great Pomp, he, his Sister, and whole Retinue came to his Tryal: The Apostle made so excellent a Desence, that Mean, Wrong'd, Poor and Unstriended as he was, he was neither Ridiculous or Contemptible to that Courtly Audience, but prevail'd so far upon the Greatest and Wisest Man there, that he social him to declare, These hast almost personaled me to be Christian; it would, methinks, be a Sin not so repeat his very handsome Answer. and made in Assert with Little should be

ould to God, that not only thou, Acts 26. 39

I would to God, that not only show, Alls 26.29; but also all shat hear me this day, were not only almost, but alsogether such as I am, except those Bonds.

His Appeal made it necessary in course Able 27. of Law, that he should go to Rome; in his Passage thicker, and in the Tempest, Hunger and Shipwrack, his Constancy was not a Support to him only, but also to the whole Company, and being thrown upon a barbarous siland, he did and received mutual Offices among the Poor Savages, not yet cultivated into Ingratitude. At Rome; the other Prisoners were carry'd into safe Custody, but he was permitted, with a Soldier only for his Ward, to live in his own hired House, teaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, no Man forbidding him; for it was only in Nero's Reign, nor had Rome yet arriv'd at the exquisite and rein'd Tyranny of an Inquisition. Thus we have been distinct in running thro' the more illustrious Passages of this Consumthro' the more illustrious Passages of this Confumwrite Life and Chamber, as they are sheld in Holy Writ, and may preferre, after all the Injuries we have done him, that there is not any Portraiture in the moffercellent Writers of Marshity, that can come up to its autive Beauty; yet was not be emittated to ferre his God only by Example, but his as Emissantly done it by Precept; where he purfus Vice, and urges Victue with all the Resion, Energy and Force that either good tenfo or Piety can Inspire: And not upon the airy and fleeting Foundation of the Insentiality achie Minds bear to the Affaults of Forestone, which implements the Impersionnee of Fleetham Marshifts, and among them Sensor.

A good Min is not only the Friend of God,
but the very Image, the Disciple, the Imitator of him, and the true Child of his Heavinly Pather:
He is true to himself, and acts with Constancy and Resolution. Series, by a cross Wind being forced into the Power of his Enamies, cust himself upon the Point of his Sword; and as the Reople
were enquiring wint suspecome of the General;
the General, four Series, is very well, and so he Expir'd A Gallant Man, is Fortune's Match! His Courage Provokes and Despites those terrible Appearances, that would Enslave use a Wife Man is out of the reach of Fortune, but not free from the Malice of it; and all Attempts upon him are no more than Korney's Acrows; they may derken the

This is Service very Spirit, Opinion and Genius; but also what Ablindity is here to after the Panegyrick of a Brave or Honest Man; as the Disciple and Imitator of God, this is instanced in the bases Action a Man can be guilty of a General's dispatching him.

* LeStragele 3d. p. of Seneca's Morals, Brift. 26.

Alf in an extreme Difficulty, and Deferring his Men-and his flowers and what is this but doing a mean Action with a greet Constenance? What would this Imitator of God, out of the Power of Fortune, do more in Obsticace to what they call so, than Sacri-ting his Life to it: But this is Bombast got into the very Soul, Futting in thinking? there the Martiner of an Harar Quarte Rosha bie qui nil moltrer Inepes.

How much better he;

Bo to fredfast, immovemble, al. I Cor. 17. v. 78.

Days abounding in the Works of the Lord, freasmuch as you know that your Labour is not in who in the Lord.

Here is supporting our selves under Missforrunes, proposed upon the reasonable terms of Reward and Pumstament; and all other is Fantastick, Arrogant and Ungrounded.

The first Reasonable.

The first Spille to Comin is most exquistely adapted to the present Temper of England, nor did ever that City (the proverbial of it) pretend to be more refinedly pleas a then at present London: But St. Paul more Emphatically diffusdes from those embring Satisfactions of Senie.

It was for the Belly, and the Belly

It Cor. 6. 2.13.

It may be God fault soften but

The methinks, throws Blash and Confusion in the true of his Readers, when he argues on these Subjects, for who can conceive his Body, the Mansion of an immortal Spirit, capable to receive the Aspiration and Grace of an Eternal God, and at the same time, by Giuttony and Drunkenners, entertain in that place Fuel to entiame themselves into Adulte Ty, Rage and Revenge? as if our Misery verse our Study.

and Chaffity, Innocence and Temperance;

their safe and egreeable Companions) were not preferable to the Convoluent of Wrath; and Fortures of Luft.

Keep 14 808 that year Bodies are 1 Cor. 6. 15. the Members of Christ, and make take the Members of Christ, and make them the Members of an Harlot?

How Ugly has he mide Garina at one Sentence? Shall I, who am confcious that he who laid down an immaculate Body, to cleanfe me from the Filth and Stain of a Pointed one, and know that the Holy, Jefus has promised to be prefere to all the Conflicts of my Soul, Banish him thence, and be Guilty of so unnatural a Coition, as to throw that Temple into the Emberces of a Mercenary Stram-Temple into the Embraces of a Mercenary Strumpet?

But must we then defert Love and the Fair

The Cordial Drop Heav'n in our Cup has thrown, ... To make the naufeous Draught of Life go down.

No. God forbid! the Apostle allows us a virtuous Enjoyment of our Passions; but indeed extirpates Enjoyment of our Passions; but indeed extirpates all our false Ideas of Pleasure and Happiness in em; he takes Love out of its Disguise, and puts it on its own gay and becoming Dress of Innocence; and indeed it is, among other Reasons, from want of Wit and Inversion in our Modern Gallants, that the beautiful Sex is absurdly and viriously entertained by tem. For there is in their tender Frame, native Simplicity, groundless Fear, and little unaccountable Contradictions, upon which there might be built Expostulations to diverts good and intelligent young Woman, as well as the sulforme Raptures, guilty Impressions, senseless Deisseations, and pretended Deaths that are every Day offer'd her. Deaths that are every Day offer'd her, No No Pen certainly ever surpass deither the Logick or Rhetorick of his Fisteenth Chapter: How does he intermingle Hope and Fear, Life and Death? Our rising from our Graves is most admirably Argued on the received Philosophy, that Corruption precedes Generation, and the cafe inflinces of new Grain, new Plants, and new Trees, from the minute Particles of Seed; and when he has Buried us how does he move the Heart with an Oh Death where is thy Sting! O Grave where is thy Victory! We have at once all along the quickest Touches of Diffres and of Triumph. It were endless to enumerate these Excellencies and Beauties in his Writings; but fince they were all in his more publick and ministerial Office, let's fee him in his private Life: There is nothing expresses a Man's particular Character more fully, than his Letters to his intimate Friends; we have one of that Nature of this great Apostle perhaps run thus. It are the wind has not and early to Philemon, which in the Modern Language would

0

T is with the deepest Satisfaction that I every Behaviour to all of that Faith, in the Articles of which I had the Honour and Happiness to Initiate you; for which, the I might presume to an Austhority to oblige your Compliance in a Request " I am going to make to you, yet chuse I rather to apply my felf to you as a Friend, than an A-" ponle; for with a Man of your Great Temper, I wknow I need not a more powerful Pretence than " that of my Ageand Imprisonment: Yet is not my " Petition for my felf; but in behalf of the Bearer, " your Servant Onefimer, who has robb'd you, and " ran away from you; what he has defrauded you of, I will be softwerable for, 'this shall be a Demand upon me; not to say that you awe me your very self: I call d him your Servant, but he is now also to be Regarded by you in a greater Relation, or'n that of your Fellow Christian;

for I esteem him a Son of mine as much as your self; may, methinks it is a certain peculiar Endearment of him to me, that I had the Happiness of gaining him in my Considerment: I beseed you to receive him, and think it an Act of Providence, that he went away from you for a

" Seafon, to return more improved to your Service

This Letter is the fincere Image of a Worthy, Pious, and Brave Man, and the ready Utterance of a generous Christian Temper; How handlomely does he assume, the a Prisoner? How humbly condescend, the an Apostle? Could any Request have been made, or any Person oblig'd with a better Gree? The very Criminal Servant, is no less with him than his Son and his Brother; for Christianity has that in it, which makes Men pity, not seem the Wicked, and he a besutiful kind of Ignorance of themselves, think those Wretches their Equals; it aggravates all the Benefits and good Offices of Life, by making 'em seem Fraternal; and the Christian seels the Wants of the Miserable so much his own, that it sweetens the Pain of the ablig'd, when he that it (westens the Pain of the ablig'd, when he that gives, does it with an Air, that has neither Oppression or Superiority in it, but had rather have his Generolity appear an enlarg'd Self-Love than diffusive Bounty, and is always a Benefactor with the Mein of a Receiver.

These are the great and beauteous Parts of Life and Friendthip; and what is there in all that Morelity can prescribe, that can make a Man do so much remains.

u

as the high Ambition of pleasing his Greater, with whom the Methods of Address are as immutable as the Percurobtain'd by Jane?

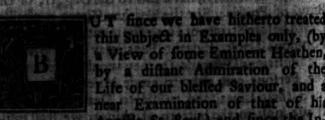

Here mathinks we could begin again upon this Antiquity for the Period and Confirmmention of his illustrious Lair, to give him the Crown and Glory of Mantyrdom? That were a medical Labour, for he that has been in a Battel, has to his Prince the Meric of having Dy'd there; and St. Paul has so often in our Narration confronted Death, that we may bestow upon him that Calestial Title, and dismiss him with the just Esslogy is his own spritcly Expression that he Dy'd daily.

Now the Address and Constancy with which this great ApoAle has behav'd himself in so many various Forms of Calemity, are an ample Conviction that to make our Life one decent and consistent Action, we should have one constant Motive of Living, and that Motive a Confidence in God: For had he and that Motive a Confidence in God: For had be breathed on any other Caufe, instead of Application to the Almighty, he must (on many Occasions which we have mention'd) have run to the Dagger, or the Bowl of Poilos: For the Heathen Virtue prescribes Death before Stripes or Imprisonment; but whatever programs I oak. Element, Pens. may have given to ous Look, Elegant Pens may have given to uftrious Diffreds d (as they would have us think the Persons are, who to evade Miscries, have proin'd their Lives, and rush'd to Death for Relief.)

If we look to the bottom of things, we shall easily observe, that 'tis not a generous Scorn of Chains, or delicate Distante of an Impertinent Being, (which two Pretences include all the Varnish that is put upon Self-murder) but it ever was, and ever will be, Pride or Cowardile, that makes Life insupportable: For fince Accidents are not in our Power, but will (in spite of all our Care and Vigilance) befal us; what remains, but that we accommodate our felves fo far, as to bear 'em with the greatest Decency and handsomest Patience we are able? And indeed Resistance to what we cannot avoid, is not the Essect of a valiant Heart, but a stubborn Stomach: Which Contumacy, 'till we have quite rooted out our Pride, will always make things too little, and one Cowardise too large: For as Fear gives a false Idea of Sufferings, and Attempts, as above our Strength, tho' they are not such, so Vanity makes things despicable, and beneath us, which are rather for our Honour and Reputation; but if Men would finterely understand that they are but Creatures, all the Distinctions of Great and Little, High and Low would be easily swallowed up in the Contemplation of the Hopes we entertain in the Place we shall have in his Mercy who is the Author of all things. who is the Author of all things.

CHAP. IV

thir Subject in Examples only, (by a View of forme Eminent Heathen, by a diffant Admiration of the Life of our bleffed Saviour, and a near Examination of that of his Apostle St. Paul.) and since the Indulgence of Mens Passions and Interests calls all things that contradict their Practice, mere Notion, and Theory: We must from this Place descend from the bright Incentives of their Actions to consider Lower Life, and talk of Motives which are common to all Men, and which are the Impulses of the ordinary World as well as of Captains, Hernes, World dinary World, as well as of Captains, Heroes, Worthies, Lawgivers, and Saints. Which when we have form'd, if it shall appear, that those Motives are us'd and improv'd, when join'd with Religion; may rest assur'd, that it is a Stable, Sober, and Practical, as well as Generous, Realted and Heroick Polition, that True Greatness of Mind is to be maintain'd only by Christian Principles.

We will venture then to affert, that the two great orings of Human Actions are Fame and Confcience; for the we mustly fay fuch a one does not value his Reputation, and fuch a one is a Man of no Conscience, it will perhaps be very case to prove, that there seldom lives a Person so Prossigate and Abandon'd, as not to preser either the One or the Other, even to Life it felf; and by the way, methinks, the quick Pleasure Men taste in the one, and as lively Smart in the other, are firong Arguments of their Immortal Nature: For such Abstracted Sufferings and Enjoyments argue our Souls too large for their prefent Mansions, and raise Us (ev'n whi we are in these Bodies) to a Being which does not at all affect 'em, but which is wholly Spiritual and

So firong (as we were going to proceed) is the Page fion for Fame, that it never feems utterly exitinct For not to look among the Men of the Sword For not to look among the Men of the Sword, (whole whole Pay it is,) and who suffer infinite Hozarda. Toils, and Miseries to enjoy it; not, I say, to dwell upon them, whose more protested Parsuit is Glory, we shall find it Intrudes also as restless upon those of the Quill, nay the very Authors who conecast their Names, are yet Vainer than they who publish theirs. They both indeed aim at your Applance, but the Mack Dissuise of themselves in the former is the Mock Disguise of themselves in the former, is but a more subtile Arrogance, at once to enjoy your Esteem, and the Reputation of Contemning it: Nay

Great Actions, and Liberal Arts, but ey a the lowest of Mankind, and they who have gone out of the road, not only of Honour, but also common Honesky, have Aill a remaining which for trails and Appaule. For you may frequently observe Maletactors at an Execution, even in that Weight of Shame and Toror, preserve as it were a corner of their Souls for the Reception of Pity, and die with the sturdy Satisfaction of not appearing to bend at the Calantic.

tion of Pity, and dye with the flurdy Satisfaction of not appearing to bend at the Calamity, or perhaps defert their Accomplices, by the Sacrace and Betraying of whose Lives we frequently see they might have far'd their Own.

By which last Instance (that the basest Men have still something Punctilious to em) we may Observe that the Sense of Fame and Conscience is never quite Kill'd, but that when we are come to the worst, we have only carry'd em into another Interest, and can'd our Gratifications that way, only to different Objects; nor can it be imagin'd that the Love-Histories we daily hear young Fellows relate of the Favours and Fonducts of Debauch'd Women to em, can be all that time design'd for a Self-Accusation: No, their idle Minds have only misted their Sense things, and the they Glory in their Shame, yet

What then must be do to make themselves easily this invincible Passon, or how shall they posses a thing that is of so inconsistent a Nature, that they will be wasters of it, they must shan it. For shoy speak to their own Advantage, or suffer anomate do it to em, they are equally Contemption to do it to em, they are equally Contemption of the short shall be said that they share must never me quite Home to em, they are it seems milerate content that they have it. Now

Nor it every Heart lies open to it, that Heart that most Pallionate to it, must be in eternal Anxiety to stain it, the ther very Love frequently leads to

to strain it, the that very Love frequently leads to the Lab of it: For when our atmost Blifs is placed in this Charming Pollethos of Praife, and the World's Opinion of our Accomplishments, a Flatterer needs no more in Attempts upon Mens Honesty, and Womens Chaftity, but their being convinced their Crimes may be a Secret: So easily, alas! are both Sexes led by Admiration into Contempt.

To rectifie therefore, and Adjust our Defires in this kind, we have the other concomitant Morive of a Living Conficience, or the Knowledge and Judgment of what we are doing, which in the Voyage of Life is our Ballast, as the other is our Sail: But the Fame and Conficience, like Judge and Criminal, are thus placed together in us, they will have an Understanding, and go into each others interest, except there is a Superior Court, in which both may except there is a Superior Court, in which both may be Examin'd. Here was the unhappy Block on which the noble Heathen flumbled, and loft his way; for the bare Confcience of a thing's being ill, was not of Confideration enough of its felf to support Men in the August of Disgrace, Poverty and Imprisonment. But Success, Applicate, Renown, Honour and Command had Attractions too forcible to mere Men, to be relinquished but with Life it Telf; to which to be relinquished but with Life it felf; to which Truth, the braver and higher Part of the Heathen

World have dy'd Martyrs.

The different Sectional fortings of themlelves into diffine Classes of Opinion, seem to be no other than the Profecution of this Natural's mpulse to Reputation which Glass was Stoical or Zpicurens, or the like, according to the force and bent of their Complexions, which they mis understood for their Conscience; and Salas begins his fine Story of Catiline's Conspiracy, with for he of the e calls filenti further. Is miss Demum vivere (*) frus Anima videqui, regotio aliquo intentus Artis, bona famam querit; only in his Opinion might truly be faid to Live, who age employ d in some useful Affair, obtain da Reaction in an Honest or Liberal Art. Thus this Auart of Sober and Excellent Sense, makes it the End Happy Consummation of a well-spent Life, to are at a good Fame; which makes our Affertion in beginning of this Discourse very Natural, viz. nce; at the Heathen Virtues, which were little elie but ouis'd or Artificial Passions, (fince their Good was Fame) must rise or fall with Disappointment or

New our Good God, who claims not an utter Extirpation, but the Direction only of our Passions, has provided also for this great Delire, in giving it a Scope as boundless as it self; and fince 'tis never to be Satisfy'd, has allow'd it as Aim which may supply it with Eternal Employment.

Let your Light so these before Men that Matt, 5.16. Heremay see your Good Works, and Glorise your Father which is in Heaven.

In this Command is the whole Business of Reputation (about which we are so miserably Anxious) wholly rectify d: And Fame no longer a Turbulent, Way-ly rectify'd: And Fame no longer a Turbulent, wayward. Uneasie Purint, but (when thus made a Subordinate, and Secondary Cause of Action) a calm, easie, indifferent and untroubled Possession.

And what more glorious Ambition can the Mind of Man have, than to consider it self actually Imploy'd in the Service of, and in a manner in Conjunction with, the

the Mind of the Universe, which is for ever Bulie without Toil, and Working without Weariness.

Thus the Spirit of Man, by new Acquisitions, will daily receive Earnests of a nobler State, and by its own Enlargement better apprehend that Spirit, after whose Image it was made, which knows no Confinement of Place.

This adjusted Passion will make Men truly Agreeable, substantially Famous, for when the first Intention pursues the Service of the Almighty, distinction will naturally come, the only way it ever does come, without being apparently Courted; nor will Men be lost through a fondness of it, by Assectation in the familiar Life, or Knavery in the Busie:

It is not a Stoical Rant, but a reasonable Confi-

It is not a Stoical Rant, but a reasonable Confidence in a Man thus Arm'd, to be unmov'd at Miffortunes, let the Sea, or the People rage; let the Billows beat, the World be confus'd, the Earth be shook; 'Tis not to him a Terror, but a daily Request of his to hasten the very last Day of Human Nature, that He may finish this various Being, and enjoy the Presence of his Maker in an endless Tranquisty.

Thus, by taking in Fame, the Christian Religion (and an other Motive) has fortify'd our Minds on all fides, and made 'em Impregnable by any Happiness or Misery with which this World can attack it: And now, if it is impartially apparent to us, that the Christian Scheme is not only the way to Ease and Composure of Mind in unhappy Circumstances, but also the noblest Spur to honest and great Actions, what hinders but that we be Baptiz'd, and resolve all our perplex'd Notions of Justice, Generofity, Parience perplea'd Notions of Justice, Generofity, Patience and Bravery, into that one easie and portable Virtue, Piety? which could arm our Ancestors in this Faith with so restless and victorious a Constancy, that by their Sufferings, their Religion, from the Outcast and Scorn of the Earth, has ascended SoThe Charpies Fiero.

The Charpies of the Greatest Manarch of the Greatest Manarch of the world when the Charbies Namebets Pomp and Authority and not in its offensive lows and despited Beginnings: But alas! its State is as much Milliant as ever, for there are Barthy and Narrow Scale, as deeply foundall at the Professive the Professive and Tachers of this Sacred Fifth enjoy, and object so 'em the Misories and Necessities at the Primitive Believers! Light and Superficial Men! Mor feeing that Ráches is a much more dangerous Dispensation than that of Poverty; this we Oppose as a Fee, that we run to meet as a Friend, and an Encerny does his Work more successfully in an Embersce than a Blowe But fince the Necessaria, Conveniences and Honours of Life which the Clergy eniny, are so great an Offence to their Despites, they are the more engaged to hold on dear; for they who envy a Man for what he has would certainly form him without it, when therefore they are both in goods and for twine irreconcileable to 'em, may they always offend with their Haspiness; for it is not to be doubted, but that there are Bishops and Governous in the Church of Englass, whose document Hospolisty. Meckanis and Charley to their Erethren, will place 'em in the forms Manisms with the most their Distribution; and fail between upon an greet and exemplary Spirita, that can conquer the Distribution; and fail between upon an greet and Enchantments of Wealth in felf.

To follow such excellent beaders, it will be accession that State we call our good Fortune, and enquire when ther ther Christianity can as well-become its Professors in the Employments of Professor, as we have send in the antis hardings of Advertity this also we shall best index; by contemplating our Natural Reason and Tendency, which Religion either affists or consists in these Circumstances.

The Estenal God, in who we Live, and Move, and may out Being, has impress'd upon us all one Nature; which as an Emanacion front him, who is Universal Life, pressent by Natural Society to a close Union with each other; which is methinks, a fort of Enlargement of our very selves when we run insto the lifeast Sensations and Concerns of our Breathers; By this force of our Make; Men are insensibly attried into each other; and by a secret Charm we lament with the Unfortunate, and rejoice with the Gald; for it is not possible for an human Heart to be averse to any thing that is human; But by sha yay Mein and Gesture of the Joyfal and District diversifie and fall into their Condition; and finds Joy is communicative, its sensonable that Grief should be remarked in Hanter. Those wife is an a Louis, so we call Gharity or Gompassion, of Oriensial Fire, we call Gharity or Gompassion of Oriensial Fire, we call Gharity or Gompassion of Oriensial Fire, we call Gharity or Gompassion.

Foundation in Nature is kindled that soble Spark of Oriensial Fire, we call Gharity or Gompassion.

Gombaccia Mankind, and by this it is that the A-embrace all Mankind, and by this it is that the A-embrace all Mankind, and by this it is that the A-embrace all Mankind, and by this it is that the A-embrace all Mankind, and by this it is that the A-embrace all Mankind. morous Man is not more fuddenly melted with Beauty, than the Compassionste with Milery.

Thurare we fram'd for mutual Kindness, Good-will ad Service, and therefore our Biessed Saviour has con pleased to give us (as a reiterated Abridgement of all his Law) the Command of Loving one another; and the Man that Imbibes that noble Principle is in so Danger of infolently transgressing against his Fellow-Creatures, but will certainly use all the Adventages which he has from Nature and Fortune to the Good and Welfare of others, for whose Beat of the Good and Welfare of others, for whose Beat of the Good and Welfare of others, for whose Beat of the Good and Welfare of others. nefit, (next to the Adoration of his Maker) he knows he was Created. This Temper of Mind, when nei-ther Polluted or Mif-led, tends to this purpose, and the Improvement of it by Religion raises on it an exalted Superstructure, which inclines him in his Words and Actions, to be shove the little Crafts and Doubles with which the World beneath him is perplex'd: He is Intrinfically possessed of what mere Morality must own to be a Fantastical Chimzen, the being woolly dis-interested in the Assurs of the Perfon he affects or befriends; for indeed when the Regard of our Maker is not our first Impulse and Defire in our Hopes and Purpoles, it is impossible but that the Fondnels of our leves and our own Interest must recur upon us, and leaven the whole Course of our Actions: When the Fountain is muddy it must stain the Rivulet, and the predominant Passion gives a Tincture to all our Cares and Pleasures; so that Men ordinarily love others out of a Tenderness to themselves, and do good Offices to receive 'em with Encrease and Usury: Nay, if we follow the best Friendship we meet with to its Sourse, and allow it to be what it sometimes really is, a passionate Inclination to serve another, without hopes or visible Possibility of receiving a Return, yet we must also allow, that there is a deep interest to our selves (the indeed a Beautiful one) in satisfying that Inclination; but that good Intention is Subject to be chang'd and interrupted (as perhaps it was taken up) by Accident, Miffake, or turn of Humour; but he that loves others for the Love of God

Ged mast be unchangeable, for the Gause of his Benevalence to me is to; and the indeed he is not without Self-regard in the hopes of receiving over Day an immense Reward of tall his Labour, yet since that is separate from this World, it is to all latents of Life as far from interfering with our Purpules, so if he had no such Expectation; and that very Prospect in him is not of a self-sistence municiple Nature, but is augmented and surthered by our Participation, while his Joys are quickned and redoubled by the joint Wishes of others: This is that Blassed State of Mind which is so excellently called Singleness of Heart; which inseparable Peace and Happiness, 'is not in the power of all the Tinsel in the Warld to discompose; for to a Christian and knowing Mind Earth is but Earth, that the resin'd Dire shine into Gesis, and glister into Gold.

He that thus justly values the Wealth which Heaven has bestowed apon him, cannot grow giddy in the Possession of it, for it serves only to express a Noble and Christian Nature, which dispenses liberally, and enjoys abstinently, the Goods which he knows he may lose and must leave: But this extensive Magnanianity, according to the Rules of our Faith, is not to be bestowed on those only who are out Priends, but must reach also to our very Rusmies; the good Sense as well as Religion is so unterly banished the World, that Men glory in their very Passions, and pursue Trisses with the utmost Vengeance: So little do they know that to Rorgive is the most arctious pitch human Nature can arrive at a Coward has often Fought, a Coward has often Conquered but a Coward were Fargave. The Power of doing that slows from a Strength of Soul conscious at its own Force, whence it draws a certain Safety which its Enemy is not of consideration enough.

crough to interrupt; for his peculiar is the Make of a leave Man to have his Trients from much above him, his Enemies much below him.

Yet the the neglect of our Enemies may fo intense a Forgiveness, as the Love of 'em is not to be in the least accounted for by the force of Confliction, but is a more spiritual and refined Moral introduc'd by him, who sly'd for those that perfected him, yet very justly deliver'd to us, when we confider our selves as Offenders, and to be forgiven on the reasonable 'Termis of Forgiving: For who can ask what he will not bestow? Especially when that Gift is attended with a Redemption from the crullest Slavery to the most acceptable Freedom: For when the Mind is in the Contemplation of Revenge, all its Thoughts must farely be tortur'd with the alternate Pangs of Rancour, Envy, Hatred, and Indignation: And they who profess a Sweet in the Enjoyment of it, certainly never felt the consummate Bliss of Reconciliation: At such an Instant the fails Ideas we receiv'd unitare, and all the base Satisfactions, Mea had in each others Paoles and Missortunes, are dispell'd, and their Souls appear in their native Whiteness, without the least Streak of that Malica or Diffaste which fullied 'em' And perhaps those very Actions, which (when we look' dae 'em in the oblique Glance with which Hatred doth always (ce Things) were Horrid and Odious, when observ'd with honest and open Eyes, are Beauteous and Ornamental

But if Men are averse to us in the most violent Degree, and we can never bring 'em to an amicable Temptr, then indeed we are to exert as obstinate

Degree, and we can never bring em to an amica-ble Femper, then indeed we are to exert an oblimate Opposition to em, and never let the Malice of our Localist have so effectual an Advantage over us, as to clospe our Good will: For the neglected and despised delking despited Tenets of Religion are so Generous, and in a Transcendent and Heroick a manner disposed for publick Good, that 'tis not in a Man's power to aword their Instruce; for the Christian is as much inclin'd to your Service when your Enemy, as the meral Man when your Friend.

Now fince the Dictates of Christianity are thus excellently suited to an enlarged Love and Ambinism to serve the World, the most immediate Method of seeing to what height they would accomplish that noble Work, is taking the Liberty of observing how they would naturally Instruce the Actions and Passions of such Persons, as have Power to exert all the Dictates and Impulses which are inspired, either by their Inclinations or Opinions; for whatever is Acted in the narrow Path of a private Life, passes away ed in the narrow Path of a private Life, passes away in the narrow Path of a private Life, passes away in the same Obscurity that twee performed in; while the Purposes and Conduct of Princes attract all Eyes, and employ all Tongues; in which difficult Station and Character it is not possible, but that a Man without Religion must be more exquisitely Unhappy, than the meanest of his Vasfals; for the repeated Pomp and Pageantry of Greatness must need a become in time, either Languid in the Satisfactions they give, or turn the Heads of the Powerful, so that the absolutely necessary that he mould have something of in time, either Languid in the Satisfactions they give, or turn the Heads of the Powerful, so that 'tis absolutely necessary that he should have something of more inward and deep regard, to keep his Condition from being an Oppression, either to himself or others teate and rangea. others.

There were not ever before the Entrance of the Christian Name into the World, Men who have maintain'd a more renown'd Carriage than the two great Rivals who possess the full Fame of the present Age, and will be the Theme and Examination of the future: They are exactly formed by Nature for those Ends to which Heav'n seems to have sent em amongst us: Both animated with a reftless Defire of Glory,

Glory, but purine it by different Means, and with different Motives: To one it conflits in an exemitive undisputed Empire over his Subjects, to the other in their rational and voluntary Obesience: One's Happings is founded in their want of Power, the other's in their want of Dasire, to opposehim: The one enjoys a Sammer of Fortune with the Luxury of a Person, the other with the Moderation of a Sparsan, one is made to Opprais, the other to telieve the Oppraised. The one is fattafied with the Pomp and Offentation of Power to prefer the debase his Inferiors, the other delighted only with the Cause and Foundation of it, to cherish and protect 'em: To one therefore Religion is but a convenient Disguise, to the other a vigorous Motive of Action.

tive of Action.

For prittout such Tyes of real and folid Honour, there is no way of forming a Monarch, but after the Machinetties Scheme, by which a Prince must ever seem to have all Virtues, but really to be Machinette from but is to be Liberal, Merciful and Just, only as they serve his interests; while with the noble Art of Hypocrific, Empire would be to be extended, and new Conquests be made by new Devices, tended, and new Conquests be made by new Devices, by which principe Address his Creatures might insensibly give Law in the Business of Life, by leading Men in the Rotertainment of it, and making their great Montres the Fauntain of all thet's delicate and refined, and his Court the Model for Opinions in Pleasure, as well as the Pattern in Dress; which might prevail so far upon an undiscerning World as sto accomplish it for its approaching Slavery) to make it necesive a superstuous Bubble for an Universal Language.

Thus when World and Show are up to pass so the Substantial Things we are only so express, there would need no more to ensave a Country but to adora

adorn Clory

dorn a Court ; for while every Man's Vanity makes him believe himself capable of becoming Luxury Enjoyments are a ready Bait for Sufferings, and the hopes of Preferment Invitations to Servitude, which Shvery would be coloured with all the Agreements, as they call it, Imaginable: The noblest Arts and Artists, the finest Pens and most elegant Minds, jointly employed to set it off, with the various Embellishments of Supergraphs Ferrial bellishments of sumptious Entertainments, charming Assemblies and polish'd Discourses: And those spottate Abilities of Men, the ador'd Monarch might profusedly and skilfully encourage, while they flatter his Virtue, and gild his Vice at so high a rate, that he without Scorn of the one, or Love of the other, would alternately and occasionally use both, fo that his Bounty should support him in his Rapines, his Mercy in his Cruekies.

Nor is it to give Things a more severe Look than is natural, to suppose such must be the Consequences of a Prince's having no other Pursuit than that of his own Glory; for if we confider an Infant born into the World, and beholding it felf the mightiest Thing in it, it felf the present Admiration and future Prospect of a fawning People, who profess themselves great or mean according to the Figure he is to make amongst 'em, what Fancy would not be Debauch'd to believe they were but what they professed themselves, his mere Creatures, and use 'em as such, by purchasing with their Lives a boundless Renown, which he, for want of a more just Prospect, would place in the number of Slaves, and the extent of his Territories; such undoubtedly would be the Tragical Effects of a Prince's living with no Religion, which are not to be furpas'd but by his baving a False one.

If Ambition were Spirited with Zeal, what would follow, but that his People should be converted into ned to Reign by his Grace, a Army, whose Swords can make Right in Power, and solve Congressive in Balles, and a sten should a Stiff-necked to the Doctrine of that wishle hurch, let 'am be contented with an Oar and a hain in the midst of Stripes and Anguish to consemplate on Him, whose Yoak is East, and whose template on Him, whose Yoak is Essie, and whose Burrhen is Light.

With a Tyrmany begun on his own Subjects, and Indignation that others draw their Breath Independent of his Frown or Smile, why should he not proceed to the seizure of the World; and if nothing but the Thirst of Sway were the Motive of his Actions, why should Treaties he other than mere Words, or solemn National Compacts be any thing but an Halt in the March of that Army, who are never to by down their Arms, 'till all Men are reduced to the Necessity of Hanging their Lives on his wayward Wills, who might Supinely, and on his wayward Will; who might Supinely, and at Leifure, expire his own Sine by other Ment Sufferings; while he daily Meditates New Slaugh-ter, and New Conquest?

For mere Man, when giddy with unbridled Powier, is an inferience Idol, not to be appealed with Myriads offered to his Pride, which may be pussed up by the Adulation of a base and profitate World, into an Opinion that he is something more than Human, by being something less; And also, what is there that Mortal Man will not believe of him-fall, when complimented with the Assibutes of God? He cannot then conceive Thoughts of a Power as Opportusion as his; But should there be such a Foe of Mankind now upon Earth, have our Sins so far provoked Heaven, that we are left utterly naked to his Fury? Is there no Power, no Leader, no Geto his Fury? Is there no Power, no Leader, no Genius that can Conduct and Animate us to our Death, or our Defence? Yes, our great God never gave one to Reign by his Permission, but he gave to another AL alfo to Reign by his Grace.

All the Circumstances of the Mustrious Life of our Prince seem to have conspired to make him the Check and Bridle of Tyranny; for his Mind has been strengthen'd and constraid by one continued Struggle, and Heav's his Educated him by Adversity to a quick Sense of the Distrosses and Misserses of Mankind, which he was born to Redress: In just Scorn of the trivial Glories and light Oftentations of Power, that Glorious Instrument of Providence, moves like that, in a Acady, calm and filent Course, Independent either of Applause or of Calumny, which renders him, it not in a Political, yet in a Moral, a Philosophick, an Heroick, and a Christian Sense, an absolute Momarch: Who satisfied with this unchangeable, just and ample Glory, must needs turn all his Regards from himself, to the Service of others, for he begins his Enterprizes with his own share in the Success of 'em, for Integrity bears in its self-lite Reward, nor can that which depends not on Event ever know Disappointment.

With the undoubted Character of a glorious Captain, and (what he much more Values than the most

With the undoubted Character of a glorious Captuin, and (what he much more Values than the most splendid Titles) that of a fincere and honest Man, he is the Hope and Stay of Europe, an Universal Goodnet to be Engrossed by us only; for distant Potentates implore his Friendship, and injur'd Empires court his Assistance: He rules the World, not by an Invasion of the People of the Earth, but the Address of its Princes; and if that World should be again rous'd from the Repose which his prevailing Arms have given it, why should we not hope that there is an Almighty, by whose Instunce the terrible Enemy that thinks himself prepar'd for Battel, may find he is but ripe for Destruction, and that there may be in the Womb of Time great Incidents, which may make the Catastrophe of a prosperous Life as Unfortunate, as the particular Scenes of it were Successful.

For

the Service of his Fellow-Greatures, a noble Contempt of Pleasures, and Patience of Labours; to whom 'the Hereditary to be the Guardian and Afferter of the Native Rights and Liberties of Mantind; and who, with a rational Ambition, knows how much greater 'the to give than to take away; whose every Day is productive of some great Action, in behalf of Mens Universal Liberty, which great Affection to 'em' tis not in the Power of their very logratitude to alienate; he is Constant and Collected in himself, nor can their Murmurs interrupt his Toil, any more than their Dreams his Vigilance; a Prince, who never did or spoke any thing that could Prince, who never did or spoke any thing that could justly give Grief to his People, but when he mention'd his Succession to 'em: But what grateful Mind can bear that insupportable Reflection? No, we will with endless Adoration implore Heav'n to continue him to us, or expire in Heaps before his Pavilion, to guard his important Life, and in the Joint Cause of Heav'n and Earth, our Religion and our Liberty, destroy like Ministring Angels, or die an Army of Martyre. 301/4 214 525 6017 of Martyrs.

normal is as 13 NO 65 state of the first term of the first of

and the first of F I N I S. White the contract of the contract is the philicular Section of thereties Successfully at

1501

